

January 25, 2020 - Pre-Recorded World Satsanga for The Kevin Moore Show

Transcript of Pre-Recorded World Satsanga by Guy Steven Needler:

"Welcome to this World Satsanga on Saturday, the 25th of January 2020 and obviously done in conjunction with Kevin Moore and The Moore Show. And Kevin is very busy at the moment, so it's been noted that there's a few of the Satsangas that haven't been on his YouTube Channel. But don't worry, you can always catch up on the Satsangas from my website.

If you go to www.BeyondTheSource.org and then click on the Home page button on the top left hand side, then look down on the right hand side, scroll down until you see "World Satsanga" and you'll find an Archive there of all the Satsanga Recordings from probably the beginning of 2012. So they're all there and you can download them all. And if you have any trouble, you can always email me at: info@beyondthesource.org, if there's any issues there and I can always send them to you or find out how to send you a link. Okay, no problem at all.

Let's have a look at what's going on this particular month. And first of all, Happy New Year to all. It's a fantastic new year and now we can start to call it the "Roaring Twenties," because now we're in 2020. We're part of the twenties, so it's going to be an interesting set of roaring twenties in this particular century rather than the previous century.

So let's have a look at the agenda for this time. Okay, so first of all, I've got a talk on "How to concentrate on the positive rather than the negative." And then I've got all of the rest of the questions. And there's a lot of questions, which we need to Hoover up from November and December and including January, so there's lots of questions there. And then we've got a short meditation to allow people to see one's path and go down it without lack of confidence. Okay.

Part 1. Lecture on "How to concentrate on the positive and not on the negative?"

So let's get started on this small talk on "How to concentrate on the positive and not on the negative?" Well, right now it is very easy to be negative with everything that's going on around us in the world whether it's localized to ourselves in our own particular, shall we say, event space or reality, or whether it's going on in the other parts of the world as well. But it's something where we, if we focus on the negative, we start to collaborate with others and work together to create a negative environment around ourselves. So everything is bad, nothing is good. Everything is going wrong, nothing is going right. And so we don't actually see the positive things that happen in the world, for instance.

So the thing to do is to when you look at something, whether somebody is discussing something with you, talking about something, when you're observing something in the news, when you're interacting with something or an individual in the environment, for instance, just look at it from a different perspective. Just look at how interesting what's going around you is, how one can benefit from what's going on, how one can learn from what's going on, how one can evolve from what's going on rather than just seeing it as something we don't particularly want to interact with.

Now when we talk about negative and positive, we talk about good and bad. But if you think of it in terms of there's no such thing as good or bad, that there's just experience, then you start to move away from away from this demarcation of that's bad and that's good. Whereas in real terms, what we're talking about is something that is really, this is what we prefer not to experience or be part of or see or hear or touch or taste, whereas this is what we prefer to experience, see or hear or touch or taste. And that also goes with those we interact with and the environments we interact with them and the circumstances we interact with them as well.

So if we can look at it in terms of the experiences being offered to us, and the beauty of that experience in terms of how we're going to grow from that experience, then we start to see it in a completely different light in terms of what the experience is. It's no longer a bad experience, it's just an experience. And the level of evolutionary progression is equal, you know. You don't get more evolutionary progression, because you're having a good experience versus a bad experience in our human demarcation. There is just a level of experiential content that comes with that and evolutionary content that comes with it.

And sometimes that which we classify as being negative is not so evolutionary progressive, and sometimes that which we consider to be positive has also not so much evolutionary progression. But sometimes we get that which we don't prefer to experience is greatly progressive in terms of our evolution and the same with positive. And of course, you get the opposite sides as well. So in effect, we can't really judge something as being positive or negative. We have to remove it and just again put it down as experience.

And the way I do it, I look at it and I take my time to experience something, and that includes how I respond to people at times, because some people want instantaneous responses. And that instantaneous response at times fuels a certain energetic desire to go down a certain route, because those individuals want to go down that certain route and want to have just justification for some mental thought process or other.

(5 min) But if you look at it in terms of what the positive side is, and turn whatever something is as being a desirable experience, and don't forget, everything is a desirable experience from the evolutionary perspective, and that goes right down to the very grassroots of everything that we experience from walking down the street, experiencing the birds in the trees, and experiencing walking in the rain, or sweeping the leaves in the rain, for instance. Everything is an experience and everything, if we look at it in a different way, is a joy to experience.

So everything that's happening around us, whether it's a broken leg or an illness or a promotion at work or winning some money in a lottery, for example, or experiencing a nice time with some friends or relatives or your loved ones, just think of it all as being a good experience. Things are there for a reason. Everything has a reason. And it's the experience and how we interact with that reason that makes us evolve as well. So think of it in terms of those, that there is nothing that is classified as being a poor method of experiencing, learning and subsequently evolving.

When we start to think in those ways, we don't actually start to focus on things we don't like. We start to realize that it's there for a reason and we're in that position for a reason. Don't forget we've steered ourselves together with our guides and helpers to put ourselves in the position where we are in fact experiencing what we're experiencing in the way we're experiencing it and interacting with that experience and those individuals within that experience in the way that we can do, based upon our knowledge at the time, the best way we can at the time.

So don't think retrospectively, although learn from retrospective thought processes, so that if you experience a similar thing in another event space or what humans call the "future," then you can better that interaction with that particular event space, and not sort of forgetting the fact that, you know, some of these events that we have are also part of a method that we have to eradicate our karmic content, so to speak. Okay, so to concentrate on the positive (if we have to demarc something as positive) versus the negative (if we have to demarc something as negative) is simply to look for the benefit of what it's giving us and the beauty in that which we're experiencing. That's the way to think about it.

Another way to think about it is think of somebody who has a terminal illness. I can remember somebody a long, long time ago saying: I would be happy to be somebody's slave not to have this illness. They appreciated that the illness that they got was part of what they were supposed to be experiencing. And that's a really advanced thought process. To be somebody's slave rather than have the illness whilst also accepting it is somebody, who understood deep down that it was simply something that they were experiencing in a particular vehicle, which allows us to experience the low frequency environment that we call the Earth.

Okay, so look at the benefits of everything that's being experienced. Look at it in those terms and it turns everything into being a wonderful experience, a lifelong wonderful experience. Okay, so even things like missing the bus, missing an airplane, being stuck in a traffic jam can be used as a wonderful experience that we can work with and understand and experience our environment and our incarnation in a more robust and complete and efficient way.

Okay, well, thank you all for listening to that and thank you for the questions. There are a lot of questions we need to go through now, so I'm going to go through them and see how far we go. Now some of these are from the people, who've given questions from previous Satsangas, so they're a continuation of the questions I've got there. So in the transcription, you might find some of these start from a different number, like 7 or 8 or 6, for instance. But don't worry about that, it's just simply a way of understanding that they're being a continuation. I might just remove these to be honest, so that you've got a better understanding that they are in fact just a series of questions. Okay.

Part 2. Questions and Answers

1. SE 4 asks you: "For example, did you know that your appendix has a higher function that is associated with the accumulation and distribution of what your spiritual healers have been calling 'core star' energy? ME: No, I had no idea." (JM)

So the first question is from JM, a wonderful chap, who is in the far western hemisphere and there's a bunch of questions here, which we can go through fairly quickly. The first question, this is obviously from "Beyond the Source" books by the way.

- So are those of us who are missing our appendix missing a function or some important spiritual energies as a result?

(10 min) The answer to that is yes and no. In essence, the distribution of energies is a function of the core star is also working with the energy templates associated with it, but the appendix in this instance is a physical function associated with that distribution of energy. And so if the physical function is not there, okay, the energies associated with the gross physical aspect of the human form is diminished, but the energy templates associated with the creation of the gross physical and the spirituo-physical aspect of the human form are still in existence.

So energetically, the function of the appendix is still there. Although physically, it is no longer there, and therefore, the energetic function of it as well is reduced. But as long as the energy templates haven't been changed to reflect the loss of that appendix, then we're not affected too badly from that perspective. So it's a good question though. Very good question.

- From SE 4: "Please note here that I have just been told by your Source Entity (this is SE1, the first Source Entity I contacted with, our God, if you want to call it that, and therefore, called SE1, when I had to create a label for the others and sort of separate it out or separate them all out together) that there are many species that you have not cataloged yet, for some of them exist as semi-physical entities, and others have not yet been created as the permutations available are not anywhere near being used up yet." Have you ever seen or are you aware of any of these semi-physical entities? Is anyone? Are they aware of us? What are they like?

There are...I feel I've seen one or two, but I've classified them as astral entities to be honest. So I'm not really confident in saying that I've actually seen any of these semi-physical entities that haven't been observed yet. And some of them, I'm being told, could be at the bacterial level, for example. So there's lots of things that we don't see and don't experience, because we haven't got the technology to see. Those things I've seen, as I've just said, I've classified as being astral entities. So if I was to ask the question were they astral entities? I'm just being told they were, so in essence, I've not seen any of these.

And to be honest, I don't go around looking to try and find things that are odd or strange, I simply am happy with what I pick up. If one is open all the time, one gets confused with all of the things that are happening from the spiritual levels, and it sort of clouds the reason for being here. And the reason for being here is to interact with the gross physical and those individuals who are interacting with the gross physical. So focusing on some of the other entities, whether they're higher frequency incarnate entities or even lower frequency or even higher frequency disincarnate entities is something that really I don't have a lot of time to do to be honest. But they are there and if I just focus now, yeah, the sky is full of things that you wouldn't believe are available. And there's another part to this question that says...

- "Others have not yet been created as the permutations available are not anywhere near being used up yet? Is there a long list of permutations in waiting, so to speak, to be created to exist on the earth? If there is, who is in charge of the process?"

Well, basically those entities who look after the Earth are in charge of this process. There's obviously a group of entities who are disincarnate, so to speak, but are a lot like certain Curators. They work with the Curators, and there's a group of entities who are sort of governing the evolutionary efficiency of working with the Earth and how it's going to pan out. So they work with the Curators and when required, they will introduce these new species, as they become necessary.

(15 min) And also some of these new species will only become available to us, as we gradually move further up the frequencies. So some of the older species will in effect become extinct, because there's no longer any need for them or their particular function is not required. But new ones will be created, as we become higher frequency. So my understanding is in effect that these newer species will become available to us, when we become a higher frequency incarnate individual. Okay, the next question is...

- "Your own planet is currently very physical in nature. As a result, it is made up of many low frequency elements—more, in fact, than any other planet in your universe." Is our planet really that unique in our entire universe? If so, it must be an immense privilege to live here. Are the spirits who line up to incarnate on earth aware of how very special this planet is?

It is unique inasmuch as the plethora of flora and fauna without a doubt. And the other fact is it's being quarantined, so that individualized free will doesn't affect the normal functionality of those other incarnate entities that exist within the lower frequencies of this universe within the multiverse, and stop them from evolving in their particular evolutionary path as well. It's the individualized free will that makes it very unique.

But also the Earth is a panfrequency body, and that means that it exists on all the frequencies associated with the gross physical, the spirituo-physical and the energetic within the physical universe. So that means frequencies 1, 2, 3, 4...right up to 12. It's the only planet that exists on all those frequencies together. Some of the others that are here will wink out of existence, but this is the only one that's truly available on all frequencies [misspoke: planets].

Now I might contradict that in a moment, when I say that in previous lectures, where I've talked about the higher up the frequencies you go, you see what's below you, but you can't see what's above you. Well, there there are some environments, where that is not strictly the case. So although a lot of the universe is, for instance, again panfrequential, what I'm being told here is a lot of the galaxy that this planet is in isn't panfrequential. And so although we'll see more content, as we go higher up the frequencies — obviously, we can't see above the frequency that we're at, we can see below — there are going to be specific planetary bodies, galactic bodies, etc., that are only available on certain frequencies. That's not because they can't be detected, it's because there are certain demarcation lines that they can be worked with.

Okay, that's new knowledge. I've just started the first few pages of the book on "The Om," so I might see if I can get some of those questions answered there. You know, why is there a bit more to this universe than I've previously thought or previously understood. Okay, and the last question is...

- And confirming point 9 (which was the previous question), SE 4 tells you: "One of the things that you need to be aware of is that your existence on planet Earth is totally bizarre compared to almost all other entities in your Source Entity's environment, including what the other Source Entities and I have created." Are we really "totally bizarre?" I thought the human form was common in our universe?

I'm being told it's bizarre, because of the number of frequencies that are associated with it to make it work properly and the detail surrounding it. It's one of the most extremely complicated low frequency vehicles that a soul can incarnate into. There are others at the gross physical level, but they're not as complicated. And that's to do with the ability to interact with the environment in the way we do, including the ability to have individualized free will. So my understanding there is that it is bizarre because of its complexity.

Other body types are much more simple, and even though they exist on the gross physical and allow a very complicated way of experiencing, learning and evolving in low frequencies, they are not as complicated as the human form, okay. For instance, they don't have the same number of chakras. For instance, they don't have the same number of energy templates associated with them. Those sorts of things are things, which demarc the human body as being quite...and the variations of the human body, which is not just on Earth, but in other locations within the physical universe, [they] all have the same traits that the human body does here. But it's the other forms of incarnate vehicle that are not so complicated. Brilliant, well, thank you for those questions, JM.

I'm just going to move on to the questions from FN now. There's about nine, so we'll see how we can go through them. And this is...some of the questions are based on the new book, "The Curators," so thanks for that and these look like there's some Kindle references here as well.

2. In "The Curators," based on the work of Enders, Beginners and Deliverers to remove or relocate events, please explain the Mandela effect? For example, did Nelson Mandela die in one event space and event stream? Did we all experience a sudden amnesia and then Nelson Mandela reappeared back into our multiverse for better progression of humanity? (FN)

(20 min) I'm told, and this is happening with a number of others, by the way. In fact there's another young lady, who was depressed is now becoming a bit of an eco-warrior, I can't remember her last name [Greta Thunberg], but I'll think of it momentarily. But this is the same sort of thing. Basically, the body of Nelson Mandela has had a walk-in and the walk-in was just at the point after being jailed and was allowed to sort of contemplate and understand the issues that it found itself in in that condition, and then create a different type of personality associated with a more benevolent personality.

So the original soul in Nelson Mandela was more of a freedom fighter, so to speak, but in the wrong way, whereas later on the new soul came in and thought of a different way or a better way to be able to achieve a similar sort of thing. So there's two ways of achieving the same thing: the one was failing miserably, whereas the other one was going to work, because it was based upon a more sympathetic understanding of how to bring peoples back together again. So rather than being a different event space in terms of this, it was all to do with a walk-in, a change of soul.

- In "The Curators" Kindle 5441, you referred to mankind colonizing other planets close to us (Earth), could you please elaborate on that?

Well, there's a number of individuals, who have been on the Earth...a number of, shall we say, civilizations of mankind in its various different frequential conditions that have left the Earth and colonized other planets, I mean even colonized right up to the center of the particular galaxy, so they are further away. They've just continued to do the work. They're not particularly involved with this individualized free will experiment, they are working in a more collective way, whilst also having some form of individualized free will. It's individualized free will but with a collective consciousness associated with it and they moved out before the Atlantean Age.

And there's a few from the Atlantean Age as well, which also were allowed to leave, but also had their individualized free will limited as well. And they're outside of our detectability to be honest. They moved a long, long way away. And some of these, certainly with the Sumerians and even the Mayans, moved out of the frequential range as well. So they're quite some distance away. So local planets, for instance, in our solar system or even Alpha Centauri haven't been populated in that respect, because they're too close to us. Okay.

The young lady I was talking about is Greta Thunberg. If you've listened to the news recently, it seems she's been doing the sort of eco-warrior bit, which is a wonderful piece of service to mankind. She's been a very upbeat individual, but previously she was suffering from depression. And I picked up this morning, when I heard the news about her and they talked about how she was depressed and very withdrawn and everything else before she started to do this work.

And then as soon as she did this work, she's become a different person, or shall we say, she became a different person before she did the work and that enabled her to do the work. And that's because the soul that's in that body called Greta is a walk-in. The body was brought into a certain level of maturity by a different soul, and that soul knew that that was all it was doing and it didn't want to really be here. But that was the part of the work that it was doing, and soon it became a certain level of maturity, the soul that's doing the work now moved in and then started to do the work. And that happens quite frequently to certain people. Okay, let's carry on with the rest of these questions.

- In your conversation with SE1, SE1 said once we reach 4th universe (15th frequency), we can choose to have free will individualized instead of various collective consciousness? Please explain this with more details, if possible?

(25 min) Well, it's a natural function of going up the frequencies that once we get to a certain level of understanding and interaction with those other entities of higher frequencies, whether they're incarnate or disincarnate, that we'll start to work in a more collective consciousness way rather than individualized consciousness way. So the whole point of individualized free will is for us to experience, learn and evolve what it means to be totally individualized and totally isolated or separated whilst still being able to work together.

But when we start to realize that the whole point of being individualized is just another gateway to becoming more of a collective consciousness, or not just working for ourselves but working for the benefit of others, then we start to work in a collective way. And so what will happen, as we become more capable of reaching higher frequencies whilst incarnate, we will seek communion more actively as a result of it, because we will want to work with each other on a more profound level for the benefit of each other.

So that's what's happening there is the 4th universe, the 15th frequency, is actually a disincarnate condition. And so most individuals at that level are working in a collective way anyway to be honest, because they are higher frequency and they've got more connectivity and more inclusivity and are more collectively conscious as well.

- How are universes associated or categorized with frequencies? Kindle Curator p5540

Well, basically, in essence each frequency has the capability of holding a universal environment. This is, of course, correct from the second full dimension upwards to the twelfth. Once we get below that, the first full dimension, the frequencies associated with it operate in a completely different way, because they're too low. So there's three sub-dimensional components in the dimensions from the second dimension up to the twelfth, and each of those sub-dimensional components has the capacity of and does allow the creation of 12 frequency bands or frequency levels. So there's 36 for each full dimension and there's 12 for each sub-dimensional component, and subsequently, there are as a universal environment or capability of a universal environment being supported in each of those frequency bands.

But in the first full dimension, the frequencies are so low that the sub-dimensional components, although they initially split out into three, reconvene back into a composite sub-dimension, which only allows 12 frequencies. And those 12 frequencies are so low that they're all required together to create a universe. So in essence, the first 12 frequencies are associated with one universe. And every other frequency above that is a universe in its own right or has the capability of being created into a universe.

- In Kindle Curators page 6497, you are discussing magnetism and attractivity. You wrote that you saw where incarnate vehicle can change attractivity and magnetism. Please explain how this could happen and describe what you saw.

If I do that, I'll invent antigravity. Well, basically what I saw is the ability to change the attractivity of anything. Right now magnetism or attractivity and repulsion is based upon a metallic function or plastics with metallic content within it, for instance. But what I saw was the ability to change things that are totally plastic to having attractivity or repulsivity. And even the possibility of wood doing the same thing as an example. And it's simply a point of realigning the quantum interactivity of the basic structure of all those different levels of structure below the atom, so it changes in a different way.

(30 min) It's a bit like changing things to go right rather than left or up rather than down or forwards rather than backwards. And as a result of that, they still have the functionality, but that functionality may be reversed or put on its side, for example. What I saw was the ability to change the way that the interaction within these various different quanta, you know, these different subatomic levels interact with each other, that gives us the opportunity to create attractivity in something that doesn't naturally have attractivity. And that's what I saw.

- What do you mean when you refer to “disappearance of boats and planes”? Could you explain if the same principle applies to Bermuda Triangle or similar locations on earth? Is the ”disappearances” connected to overlap or gap in the frequencies? Curator Kindle 6992

Yes, exactly. Disappearance of boats and planes can sometimes be attributed to areas of locally high frequency in a lower frequency baseline location interacting with an area of locally low frequency in a higher frequency level within the same location or a geographical location. And so these things like planes or ships move from one frequential level to another frequential level, because there's a frequential overlap. And then they can't get back, because they move from one to the other and adopt that frequency level as their frequency of domicile.

Now the only way they can move or change is if you interact with other entities, who are capable of manipulating, for example, the frequencies locally around them. And obviously, that's quite common, because lots of entities use mechanical means or energetic means to move around different frequencies by going from one frequency to another as a shortcut. So the only way some of these individuals, who get trapped in a different higher frequential environment (if they should want to leave, that is, why would you want to leave a higher frequential environment) could come back basically is if they interact with another group of entities, incarnate or otherwise, that would allow them to work with them to create a new condition where they could move from the lower frequency aspect of a higher frequency and interact with another overlap, where there's a subsequent higher aspect of a lower frequency environment, you know, very close to it or overlapping with it.

- What are the limitations of variety of form factors created by Vehicle Creators? Curator Kindle 7352

There are no limitations. Basically, whatever is required for an incarnate vehicle to exist in an environment, which is considered to be an evolutionary opportunity, then there can be an incarnate vehicle created. Simple as that. From our perspective, it's only our imagination that limits us or our experience that limits it. And that's how that particular question gets answered. There's no limitations.

- Points of consciousness during meditation has been described as when we reach that blackness, no gravity, complete silence and love and One can engage in remote viewing or healing, etc. Could you state the frequency level where one reaches the point of consciousness during TTF (Traversing The Frequencies)?

Yes, so the Traversing The Frequencies work is you can get to this point, any point with TTF, once you've moved out of the gross physical and the spirituo-physical. So that would be when you move above the 12th frequency basically, because when you're above the 12th frequency, you're outside of the energies associated with the creation of the incarnate human vehicle. And then you've also moved above the 12th to the 13th frequency and you're in the second full dimension. So you start to move into those different levels of consciousness and connectivity then. Although moving just simply into the fourth frequency helps in terms of one's increased level of connective functionality. But the higher up the frequencies you go, and the more that you disassociate yourself from the gross physical or the physical universe, the more enhanced that level of connectivity and clairsentience, if you want to call it that, comes into it as well.

- Could you elaborate about the gap(s) between frequencies and the overlap(s) between frequencies during TTF? In your book, are you saying that we are “seeing past, present and future” in connection to traveling the frequencies? Are the Akashic records accessible in the gaps between frequencies? Could we see the events of past and future when we travel through gaps because events are still happening? I am not using the word "time" since events are not contained in time capsules. Kindly clarify.

(35 min) Well, basically the gaps in between the frequencies are a function of substructure, which are part of the structure of the Source, which is above and beyond that which is the basic structure of the Source, which is obviously from the Origin. So there's substructure within everything really. And that substructure is what is used for the Curators to move around the sort of standard, or should we say, the dominant structure of that which is part of the Source that is being used or isolated to create the multiversal environment. So these aren't where the Akashic records are. The Akashic record is simply a set of memory function of the Source that is specifically focusing on the interactions of incarnate mankind and other human type vehicles.

Others have a different record, so to speak. So think of it in terms of each species of incarnate vehicle has its own memory set that is where everything that is experienced, learned and evolved by every soul in every body that they've ever been in is recorded in a particular location within the Source. And that is not in these gaps between the frequencies. That's a higher function of Source that is outside of the multiverse, but nevertheless accessible, if you have the methodology of doing it.

The only way to see the events of past, present and future is because we are moving into different event spaces. And if you can go into an event space where everything is happening concurrently, i.e. you access all the event spaces concurrently, then you can choose to see everything concurrently, which in my experience creates a white wall, you know, the white screen, because everything is happening too quickly and you can't experience everything concurrently whilst in this particular incarnate state. We simply don't have the capacity until we're disincarnate. Or you can simply isolate an event that is classified as being "future" from our perspective.

You know, don't forget there is no such thing as past, present and future, there's only sort of Now. And that Nowness can be experienced concurrently with every other Nowness. And so what happens is we've got this capability of isolating an event space from another, should we decide to do so, should we interact with event space in a, shall we say, robust and repeatable and knowledgeable way. That's a bunch of good questions there. Thank you very much. And we're not quite on the last page yet, but we're not too far away.

We've now got WP, who sent in a group of questions. Thank you very much from certainly well before Christmas. So I'm very happy with this. There is a whole bunch of these things. In fact there's two emails that were sent that resulted in what's effectively about 8 questions here I think, looking at this. So we'll go through them one by one. And then there's another couple of questions from another person called KS over in Bangkok in Thailand, which is fantastic. So let's go for the first question. These are quite straightforward.

3. Are the Curators robot-like or are they individualized sentient energy, each a unique creation with different characteristics, tendencies, capabilities, etc.? If the latter, how do they relate to one another? Hopefully, not like present day humans. (WP)

No, the Curators aren't robot-like. The Curators are disincarnate entities who are simply operating on a different level. They operate in service to those who have chosen to interact and move into the evolutionary cycle to help the Source accelerate its own evolutionary progression as fast as possible. So consider them as being similar True Energetic Selves to ours, but they simply haven't decided to enter into the evolutionary cycle through incarnate methodology. That's a way to think of them. And their sole purpose in life, or existence I should say, is to make sure that the multiverse is maintained in its evolutionary most efficient condition.

- That question causes me to wonder again, are all TES's unique creations with different characteristics, tendencies, capabilities, etc. and if so, what gives rise to these differences? A related question, is the TES that created Jesus more evolved than others or was it just that the aspect Jesus had 6% sentient energy vs 5% or less for most other aspects? Is the TES that created Hitler less evolved than others or was it just that the aspect Hitler had less than 5% or was he an aberration?

Well, the first question is the True Energetic Selves are individualized units of sentience and energy separated out from Source, and they do gain their own characteristics and tendencies based upon what they've achieved or what they've experienced through their own work and through the individualization of smaller units of sentience and energy from themselves that we call Aspects (souls) or Shards (sub-souls).

(40 min) And so they create their own personality or their own sort of energetic signature based upon the evolutionary content and experience associated with what they've done. The thing about Christ and antichrist, for example, Jesus and Hitler, is that they are not specifically more or less evolved. I mean the Jesus aspect or TES is in a higher dimension than where we are right now. But I've seen other individuals who are from the higher frequencies within higher dimensions. And so it's just that that particular TES has decided to work in a different way with us to try to make us move in a different direction and evolve in a different way.

And that's the same with Hitler or the antichrists. In fact, you could argue, and one of the things I'm picking up is that these so-called "antichrists" are generally more evolved than those who are the "good guys," so to speak, because they take on-board a lot of negativity and focus from other incarnate entities as well. So they take a lot of energy from them. They receive a lot of negative energy from them, because they are doing things in a different way. So they have to be more highly evolved to take on-board that level of negativity from other incarnate entities than those who would have been on the good side, so to speak. Okay.

But there will be a whole book on this later, which will describe all the different things, all these different, shall we say, Christs and antichrists or like the Buddha and like Hitler, like Genghis Khan and like Idi Amin, all those sort of people and also Mother Teresa. All these different things that they've got a reason for them. And so there's going to be a book that puts me in a position to be able to communicate with these particular entities and get more in-depth information as to what they were doing and why they were doing it.

- While reading "The Curators," I am amazed at the intricacy and depth of organization and activities required to maintain and evolve the multiverse. It is another reminder of the supreme intelligence behind all of creation — breathtaking. So while you can communicate with the SE as if it was another wise person, the majesty of SE remains incomprehensible. Given SE's majesty, this again causes me to wonder how/why our SE is able to set in motion the evolutionary cycle that results in a low frequency environment, trapping entities in a Karmic Cycle that results in a completely dysfunctional human race (at least up to now). It seems as if the SE has this dysfunction within itself that needs to be worked out on this plane.

Well, there's more to this by the way, but I'm just quickly going to go into that. Everything has to be experienced, and in general, there is a little bit of an unwritten observational rule that suggests that the harder we experience something, or the more difficult it is to experience, the greater the evolutionary gain. And therefore, that which we put ourselves into to be able to experience, learn and evolve, and pass that evolution on whilst not losing it to our Creator, is done in such a way that we can be most efficient.

So if you're experiencing hardship, you're evolving faster than you would do, if you were experiencing pure joy. I mean pure joy is fantastic, but pure joy is only a slight step away from what we are when we're in the energetic. So to experience hardship and difficulty really does catapult us evolutionarily, so this is why this is allowed. And it's also balance, don't forget. And the physical universe is all about balance or duality.

- Another way to ask this is why didn't SE start with frequency 13 and avoid the perpetual human misery with entities floundering around looking for meaning? I sometimes ask SE, is this the best you can do? Or is humanity only a subset (the lost souls, so to speak) of all entities, most of which never fell into the Karmic trap? Help!

Yeah, I mean basically it's to do with us making the decision to experience things and allow things to change in a way, which creates the potential to experience things in different ways or to create the condition where we recognize that we've gone the wrong way.

(45 min) And we have gone the wrong way. There is no doubt about that. There is a worldwide wrongness about what we're doing. But the potential for change later and the subsequent evolutionary progression is amazingly high. So it's a little bit like to allow this pendulum to swing up, it must swing down. And that's the way to do it. And Newton said, what goes up must come down. But also what goes down must come up. That's a way to think about it.

- At what frequency/universe do aspects return to when in the energetic? Same as where the TES resides? Where do the TESs reside?

Well, our True Energetic Selves (TES) reside in a frequency within the multiversal environment that is relevant to its overall evolutionary level. There are aspects or souls who get stuck here, because they want to stay associated with the Earth, and they would hang around the spirituo-physical levels of the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th frequency. We classify them sometimes, if they're observed, as ghosts or other things, a poltergeist.

But generally, when an aspect, if it's not attached to the Earth, it will go back to an area, a geographical area that is sort of close to the TES. It'll definitely go back to the frequency that the TES is domiciled on, although depending upon what's going on with the aspect and whether it wants to stay or it needs to stay in a projected state, it will stay in that frequency associated with the TES, but not enter into one of the levels of communion associated with reconverging the sentience and the energies back in with the TES.

Okay, so for instance, most people on Earth are around the high end of the fourth full dimension (FD), so that's where a lot of them are here. Okay, that'll be say, for instance, the 8th frequency of the 3rd sub-dimensional component of the fourth full dimension, although there are those in the third full dimension and those in the fifth full dimension, but not many. Most people are in the fourth full dimension or the lower end of fourth/upper end of the third FD.

- As an aspect accrues Karma, does the aspect keep reincarnating until free of Karma or does it reemerge with its TES, who in turn accrues the Karma, who then needs to create another aspect to release the Karma?

Generally, the karma is associated with the aspect. And that level of addiction to being here, you know, to have material wealth, good health, good partnerships, sensory excitement, all those sort of different things needs to be worked off by that particular aspect. It's all about being in the physical but not being of the physical. Once you can come in here and not be affected by things in a profound way, i.e. you can go into an environment that would normally affect you, but it doesn't affect you, that means you're in the physical but not of the physical, then you've almost moved beyond the need to be here, because you've removed the karmic state of attractivity or addictivity to low frequency thoughts, behaviors and actions and sensations.

So generally, although there are ways of isolating karma associated with an aspect to allow the aspect to enter into a form of communion with the TES, when that aspect is then reprojected out into the physical environment to experience, learn and evolve, that karmic content will be reassigned, so to speak, to that particular aspect as well. So there's ways in which it's reassigned. And sometimes it stays with them, if they stay in a projected state.

- What is it about the energetic that is so unsatisfying that a Karmic afflicted aspect/TES is compelled to return to the incarnate state? Why not just move on and continue to evolve within the energetic? Is it because it has no choice in the matter? Can we only shed addiction to Earth while on Earth?

No, anything to do with the physical universe creates a level of karmic interaction, if we're not careful. So all the frequencies within the physical universe are in some way able to give us some level of attractivity to these low frequency environments and thoughts, behaviors and actions. Obviously, the higher up the frequencies we are within the physical universe, the less addicted we're likely to be to being here.

(50 min) But the whole point of being here is to work with the potential to be addicted, never be addicted, work with addiction, get to understand it and then go energetic cold turkey, so to speak, or karmic cold turkey. So the whole point of it is to experience it, work with it, either be divorced from it straightaway or work on how to divorce oneself. And this work in how to divorce oneself from the karmic content of the physical is another way in which we accelerate our evolutionary growth. So it's all about experiencing, learning and evolving and then turning that experiencing and learning into supreme evolving through being in the gross physical.

- Do all entities, aspects/TESSs, in the evolutionary cycle choose to incarnate/are required to incarnate? Why did they incarnate in the first place? Only to find out that it was a trap from which to escape? Can they simply decide to remain in the energetic and avoid accruing incarnate related Karma? Or does that nullify the opportunity to evolve?

Certain TESSs do in their way of evolving choose not to project parts of themselves into the gross physical aspect of the multiverse. They evolve at a different speed on a different level in a different way. So it's not a compulsory item that we need to incarnate to accelerate our evolution, there's many other ways of doing it. And obviously, the Earth is an extreme way of accelerating evolution. But it's not a prerequisite requirement. It's not a condition of existence that we go and incarnate on the Earth.

There are myriad countless billions of TESSs and aspects from those TESSs [misspoke, reversed], who haven't even worked on becoming associated with the Earth, for instance. Some of them are going to the physical universe to higher frequencies and doing it that way. And there are those who do it slowly by just staying in the energetic. The plethora of different ways of experiencing the multiverse is what creates a holistic understanding of the multiverse, and therefore, a holistic understanding of that area of the Source's sentience that it is occupying within the Origin. And therefore, this is the plethora of the ways in which the Origin understands itself as well. So it's a good question. That's the answer.

- If every sentient being is created by our SE directly or indirectly, why would it create those in the evolutionary cycle with the propensity to foul their respective environments, physically and psychically, and then at the same time necessitate the creation of Curators (12 to the power of 12 per evolutionary cycle entity) to clean up the mess? Is it to enable free will within the evolutionary cycle?

I'll need to reread this just to make sure. There's no desire for the Source to create an entity that is particularly hellbent on, so to speak, making a mess of things. It's subsequently a very advanced soul that decides to go into a difficult way of incarnating or experiencing interaction with the environment and move out of it. They choose a very difficult task. And so in reality, the souls that choose the difficult existences are the ones that evolve faster and the ones that are highly evolved. And also those who choose to be of service in some way, so to speak, are also highly evolved.

But it's all to do with needing to experience every potential aspect of what is available to experience in the most profound detail possible. And so the objective of being in a position where you make a mess of it and then recover from that mess — and that mess might be recoverable in two or three lives' time — is one way of experiencing it and evolving from it and doing that which other souls would shy away from, so some of these souls are really, really brave souls. Last two questions are from KS in Thailand. Fantastic.

5. People who believe in karma tend to believe that karma is linear, with all beings reincarnating always from the past to the present to the future. However, I've been feeling this isn't right. I think the linearity is based on the concept of (linear) time created by humans. Maybe karma is in fact cyclic. Beings from the future can reincarnate in the past and vice versa. Not sure if this is correct. What's your opinion on this? (KS)

(55 min) Yes, the linearity of moving from one point to another point is simply a human condition. Other incarnate entities at higher frequencies understand that this is an incorrect observation. Mankind is the only incarnate entity that's managed to create a metric for something which doesn't actually exist. And when we start to understand this, then we'll progress faster from a scientific perspective.

Karma is something we experience and we can experience the removal of karma before we've created that karma, if that makes any sense, because everything is I wouldn't say cyclic, it's more spherical and occupying the same space concurrently in the same event space and the same reality space, so to speak. So everything exists concurrently. So there is no past, present or future, there's just Now. And that Nowness can mean that if you wanted to focus on it, you could experience something that you've not created the conditions to experience, and you can create the fruits of that experience without going through the process associated with the creation of those experiences.

So everything is spherical. And also you can experience the hardship and the work to create the end product without actually experiencing the end product, because you wanted to experience that which creates the end product, not actually the product itself. So that's another way to think about it. So I'd classify it as being spherical or spherically holographic is another way of saying it. It's difficult to explain what I see, but basically everything is there now. Okay, so again one can experience a karmic experience without also experiencing the events, so to speak, that create the karmic experience, because that's already been experienced or isn't needed to be experienced as well. Something else to think about.

• I'd love to see you, if possible, publish a book dedicated to explain the concept of thoughtform, if it does exist and if it interests you.

Yes, thoughtform does exist and we create lots of thoughtforms. That's quite obvious, it is now, but not to many people, mind you.

• There aren't many books these days that talk about thoughtform in details. One that was written by Besant and Leadbeater, some of the pioneers for this concept, isn't detailed enough. The book is so thin.

Besant and Leadbeater were western yogis and they were really advanced yogis. Unfortunately, they were derided by certain individuals, who were trying to knock down the work they were doing by accusing them of certain things, but that's not for me to broadcast.

- The reason why I'd like to have a greater understanding of thoughtform is I find that nowadays some people worship what they claim to be gods or goddesses. The problem is some of these entities come from literature or fiction. The Hindus in India, for example, worship Hanuman in Ramayana. In Thailand, some people worship Sun Wu Kong from the Journey to the West or even Natasha from the Avengers. What!!!!? There are some people here claiming they're mediums for these entities.
- So I want to know if these are mere thoughtforms, what the thoughtforms really are, how they work and whether they're safe or dangerous? And is it possible that some ghosts or spirits are not real ghosts or spirits but only thought entities created and given life by our collective consciousness?

Some ghosts are astral entities that we create, yes, that's definite. I might deal with thoughtforms in one of the books, either this book I'm working on now or the book that's going to be called "Beyond The Origin." So I'll have to make a note of this somewhere and definitely to make sure that I remember, so to speak, to go over the content. But generally, some of these things, some of the Hindu gods are basically — they are used as a focus really, for meditative focus. And that level of meditative focus is misunderstood now, so the whole point of them being used as a meditative focus has been lost and they're now being revered as real sort of gods or thoughtforms or things that control our existence, which is not correct.

What I would say is if you see anything that has a human form, I mean even the Hindu gods you see lots of them — some of them benevolent, lots of them angry and aggressive. A lot of them are imagery that have been remembered and broadcast down through the ages from those who survived Atlantis as well — those entities that have animal bodies. Egyptians had these as well and also the blue skin or even purple skin. These are individuals, who survived the Atlantean downfall and ended up being recorded in history as being giants or gods or messiahs or people of immense power. So a lot of these things are literally put in individuals, who were probably just quite wealthy individuals put on a pedestal, because they were able to do things or had an appearance that was not normal or not considered to be something that could be achieved any more, and therefore, they were gods or have higher power.

Okay, so I will look at the thoughtform part, if not in this book, in one of the other books. So don't worry, I won't forget it. I've made a note of it here and I'll put it in my notes with the next book, so at least it gets passed on. Okay, that's the end of this Satsanga.

Part 3. Meditation

(1 hr) What we need to do now is the meditation, which is going to be quite a nice meditation for us all to work with. Let's have a look — a meditation to see one's path and go down it without lack of confidence.

Please download the high quality MP3 File to do the guided meditation with Guy Steven Needler via his website or blog (meditation starts around 1:01 hr).

(1:11) Closing comments: I thank you very much for listening to this first Satsanga in 2020. We're in the roaring twenties now, although I don't think it'll be as crazy as the 1920s. Thank you for listening to it. Thank you for broadcasting it to others, if you pass it onto others. It's always useful to do that. And I look forward to working with you again February's Satsanga. So namaste to you all and God's love to you all." END

NOTE: I have prepared a searchable pdf document with ALL World Satsanga Lectures, Questions and Answers collated from 2016-2020 to make it easier for us to see what questions have already been asked in previous Satsangas and what answers were given at the time. This will allow us to ask NEW questions or ask similar questions from a different angle after reviewing what we already know. This document is over 600 pages, so don't try to print it out.

You can go to Needler's website (www.beyondthesource.org) to find the document at this URL:
