

December 19, 2020 - Pre-Recorded World Satsanga for The Kevin Moore Show

Transcript of Pre-Recorded World Satsanga by Guy Steven Needler:

"Welcome everybody to this World Satsanga held on the 19th of December 2020 in conjunction with Kevin Moore and The Moore Show. And his latest YouTube channel "They Call Us The Channelers," which is a very interesting series of shows that show various different qualities of individuals who are channeling information from the greater reality.

Okay, so let's look at the agenda for this December's World Satsanga, which is just before Christmas, so Merry Christmas to you all. And let's hope that 2021 is a more fruitful and productive year than this year has been. So the agenda is as follows: I'm going to do a short talk on how I know the overall frequency of humanity and how it can be calculated, or whether it can be calculated. That's one way to look at it. And then we're going to go through the questions and there's quite a lot of questions. In fact, there's so many questions, I've had to put one group of questions back to January, so thank you to everybody who sent those questions in. They are very good questions and we're going to have a very enlightening set of responses, I hope.

And then we're going to do a meditation at the end to open everybody's minds and hearts to the greater reality and to change how we live and how we interact with it. Okay.

Part 1. Lecture on "How do I know the overall frequency of humanity and how it can be calculated?"

So the question about how I know the overall frequency of humanity and how it can be calculated is actually quite a simple response, to be honest. It can't be calculated. You see lots of different things of people saying that it's this, it's that. You know, we have a frequency of the Earth based upon known resonant frequencies that mankind uses. But the frequencies that I talk about are not quite as we understand it. We use the word "frequency" to describe the different frequential levels associated with the construct and the structure of the multiverse. But it's something a bit more subtle than that.

So in terms of people who say that it can be calculated, it actually can't be in terms of what we are. It's a function of evolution. It's a function of our evolution whilst we're incarnate and how we work together whilst we're incarnate, as to whether we are raising our ability to communicate and connect with the greater reality or our True Energetic Self, which we sometimes call the Godhead or the Oversoul or the Higher Self. And as such, it's difficult to put numbers on it.

Now sometimes I get asked questions about what is somebody's frequency and I say, Well, basically, you're around 3.5 in terms of the levels associated with the human form and it's relevant to the frequencies that are part of the physical universe. Physical universe having twelve frequencies, but those frequencies are not the same as what we would call a frequency, because our frequencies are much lower, much, much lower than what is required to create an understanding of the structure of the multiverse. So although the word frequency is used, it's actually something slightly different.

So in terms of humanity, I tend to get a feeling for it. It's a bit like using clairsentience or knowingness or the connectivity to know that if we have to put a structure in place, because mankind uses structure, to try to explain stuff that is basically structureless, although it gives us a helping hand to understand it. When I do the Traversing The Frequencies Workshops, I show a number of different ways to understand how the structure of the multiverse works. And then when we do the workshop, we move from structure to structureless. We find that although we can understand in a rudimentary way the structure of the multiverse and the frequencies that are associated with it, and the subdimensions and the full dimensions, and if you want to go into further detail, zones and continuums, etc. Above that, then we start to get into a position where we can understand some way of understanding, if that makes any sense. We have a tool to help us understand a tool to help us understand a tool.

And so, when I say a frequency, it's giving us an understanding of how fast an individual or humanity in this instance has evolved in a way that allows them to access various aspects of the multiversal environment — the multiversal environment being represented by the physical universe in this particular instance. Okay, so in terms of it being calculated, it can't, because there's no means to calculate something, which is incalculable as such. All we can do is reference it in an intuitive way to a structure that we're using as a bit of an interface to understand the different levels that we can achieve within the structure of the multiverse, in this instance the physical universe in relevance to where we are from an incarnate and how our evolutionary level works with us whilst we're incarnate.

(5 min) So for me, it's a really intuitive thing and if people show me the mathematics associated with it, I would say, if you want to think of it in that way, you can do. But it can't be calculated. It's something that I intuitively know. And if I see somebody and they ask me what their frequencies are, I can tell them. I can tell whether they've gone up or gone down. And any connected individual or somebody who is self-realized will be able to do a similar thing, based upon their own level of understanding. And if we wanted to use the same methodology, they would be able to convert or overlay their understanding of where we are with that as well.

Okay, so based upon that, it's incalculable. It's understood. It's intuitively known or connectively known when we enter into transcendental meditation or a samadhi state. Or even just being connected all of the time. Or meditating on it. It's something that you know. You simply know. And as a result of that, if you wanted to go into a level of detail associated with the evolution of an individual and how it's got to that position, it would take a long time to get the details associated with it, because there's an awful lot of information revolving around an aspect or soul incarnate and their True Energetic Self or Godhead or Oversoul, that much larger portion of them, which is still within the structure of the multiverse and stays there, to give you an understanding of what can be used in terms of what they are.

So it's a very difficult thing to ascertain in a simple way. Okay, I hope that's answered the question, because it's very sort of esoteric, but it's supposed to be. There's nothing that mankind has created as a metric that can be used for it. The models I use are there to help us move in a direction. Once we've moved into that direction, we start to become expansive, we then get to a point where we can start to understand the structureless aspect of it, or should I say, start to accept it rather than understand it.

Okay, I hope that answered...that's quite a good question that started that particular short lecture, as it happens. And it is only a short lecture. It's only about eight minutes. But basically, it's a very difficult subject, because it's not quantifiable in that way. And then the answers that come along, that I get, are literally just given to me. And I trust them, because I know that with the Source of the information.

Okay, so let's have a look at the questions. We've got a lot of questions from a number of individuals. We've got 1, 2, 3, 4 individuals spanning questions over nearly three sheets of paper, which is really quite good. So the first question, there's a bit of a preamble to it as well. It's from AB.

Part 2. Questions and Answers

1. What is the best method to get out of one's concepts, thought-patterns, habits and other conditionings of mind? (AB)

- Before you answer, however, I would like to note that I can not mentally get past this paradox: If I identify with my ego, as I can not help but do, then not identifying with my ego would just be my ego trying not to identify with my ego. See the problem?

So it's a bit of a Catch 22 there.

- Moreover, if I am the result of conditioning, then attempting to get free from conditioning would be inherently absurd. So it seems that any attempt I make to get out of the loop of ego-activity just feeds the loop further, and that it doesn't really matter since I really have nothing to escape from anyway.
- But, I have tasted seeing things freshly, alive, without the distortion of concepts and other images, so that I also understand the way ordinary perception absolutely pales in comparisons to that particular way of being.
- So, do you have any advice or say on this? Is every method really just a trap in the end? If not, what is the best way to achieve a mindless state/beginner's mind.

(10 min) The Japanese have a word for beginner's mind. It's called "mushin." It's emptiness basically. And so the best way to really move out of one's concepts and thought patterns and conditions of mind is to...and it's a bit coarse this is, to be honest...it's just to accept that everything that we've known before is irrelevant. Now that may also be feeding the ego in some way, shape or form. Understanding that the ego is actually a function of us being incarnate, it's an important thing. And because we will never lose the ego, while we are incarnate, and anybody that says that they're in control of their ego or they've eradicated the ego is being fooled by their ego. And hence, the start of this preamble by AB.

So what we need to understand is that we can work with the ego to create a condition where it sort of sustains...or it knows it's going to be sustained, but not in the level that it wants to be in, but nevertheless we try to change the way in which our ego perceives things. So in essence, what we're trying to do is to stop and start again and reprogram that personality that's created as a function of being incarnate. And almost we need to, I wouldn't say write off everything we've done or delete it, but put it to one side and start again with fresh eyes approach, with a new approach. It's like going to school or university and learning new subjects that you've never seen before, heard of before, discussed before, or had any knowledge of before. So you go into the classroom and you learn as a complete beginner. And so that's what we have to do.

So we have to say, everything I know is in the past or didn't exist or is there as another life, for example, some other incarnation. And then we have to consider that basically everything that we learn now is brand new. Everything that we consider, think about, behave or work with is new. And then we can start to reprogram ourselves. But we have to start from scratch. We have to sort of stop relating to what we were previously, what we thought of previously, how we considered things previously, the things that we thought were datums in knowledge no longer exist. So we have to put ourselves in a position where we start again basically. And that's the only way to do it. It's very hard, very, very hard.

So I can understand the questioner about how it could potentially feed the ego or go in an egoic loop, where you go from one particular consideration to another consideration, and that consideration of trying to detach from the ego actually reassigns us to the ego or reinforces the connection with the ego. But if we think that all we're doing is reprogramming it instead, so the ego stays, but it's being reprogrammed. It's a bit like having a new computer or a new phone.

It's brand new, it's fresh, it's empty. Then you start to put all your stuff in there and then it becomes you. So if you put different stuff in there, it's a different machine to what the previous or old machine was. And that's a way to think of it.

That's the way to think of the ego is that we're reprogramming that particular aspect of us, our personality, if you like, that hidden, sort of subconscious personality to being something else. And then as we start to work with on that and not relate to what we were, we start to create a new us, which is also detached from what we were and the potential reality that we've created around ourselves to create a new us and a new reality. Okay, well, I hope that answers that question. It's a very good question. And it's a very hard thing to overcome.

Okay, right, the next question. Basically, I think that I've answered this question in the short lecture. It's from US.

2. The number of backfill people have been increasing steadily over the years from the original 8% of the population to an alarming 41% in 2020. You said they are located mostly in the western world. (US)

- Please explain: Does the U.S. have a larger percentage of backfill people than say China or Russia or Europe? How does that affect the world's superpower relationships over the next 30 years? If you'd like to say more about it, please do. That could be a private communication as the case may be or address it in December's lecture.

(15 min) So the question was how do I calculate it, but I've just gone through the calculation. There isn't a calculation. It's basically intuitive, so that's how I gain that. Basically, I don't know which event spaces to go into and in terms of getting this information, it just comes to me. And those people who have done the TTF exercises will realize that when we go into the higher level of Level 3, we start to realize that we can move the multiverse around us rather than go to different aspects of the multiverse, so it's a bit like that. I'll just look at this other part here, the first part.

The number of backfill people is mostly in the western world, not specifically in the U.S. but it's sort of evenly distributed. And certainly it's more prevalent in areas where there is poverty. Certainly where people are focused upon their physical survival is where we start to see the increase in backfill people. This doesn't mean to say that they're bad people, it just means to say that they're more focused on being in the physical and they stand less chance of becoming aware and awake or self-realized or in fact, they don't become self-realized or aware and awake.

And I'm being given a couple of locations here. Basically, it's like Brazil and Mexico, where there's a lot of corruption. There's corruption everywhere in the world actually, so I don't know why those two countries became sorted out or become examples. Places like Mexico, Brazil, etc. where there's a lot of, shall we say, difficulty in existing. There's lots of things happening that is wrong. There's governance that is wrong. It's difficult to survive. The opportunity to have a good job or a good role is difficult. Moving out of the squalor, for instance, which can happen anywhere in the world, you know, poor living is difficult to get out of because of the environment and the individuals around it. These places tend to sort of, shall I say, perpetuate this potential area, so even backfill people can't or have a zero chance of getting any better. Or should I say, even really evolved people have a difficult chance in getting better there.

Backfill people in the environments that are, shall we say, more enlightened, tend to also absorb that enlightenment as well, but not to the same level as a human soul, so to speak. So to answer the question, it seems to be where there's more materialism is where the backfill people tend to primarily located. So it's anywhere where materialism is the dominant way of existing is where the percentages are.

I hope that answered the question, because I think I didn't really answer the question last time. So it doesn't give a percentage, it just tells you that materialism is an addictive function. It's a function of karma. And this is where we tend to find that the backfill people tend to become part of, because it's potentially a greater level of, or should we say, a level of free will, which they're going into and one where everybody can get addicted to. Okay, let's look at the second part of this question.

- I was wondering if you could discuss in your Lecture the overall frequency of humanity and HOW you calculate that? (I've mentioned that.) Is it an average of ALL of humanity, including all the hotspots of higher and lower frequencies? In WHICH event space(s) — the one you and I are in right now??

So to answer the rest of this question, as a sort of supplement to the little lecture at the start, yes, I get an average of all of humanity, including the hotspots. So I get the lowest of the highs and the highest of the lows and the highest of the highs and the lowest of the lows and it all averages out to give me an overall frequency of the Earth. And it includes the event spaces that we all create and the local realities that we're all creating in total. So it's the sphere that is the Earth that I get the overall average of humanity's frequency. As we told, it's not quite the frequency that we understand from a physics perspective. So it's an average of that. So the next part of it down here is...

- The reason I ask is that a lot of channels are saying that with Covid, we are processing all the chakra issues starting from the root to the crown and that will take about 6-7 years — 2027 is a year when things will change for the better, much better and 2040 is a year when First Contact with 4th frequency hybrids will take place (at least in some event space). What do you see? Is that just one event stream scenario of a thousand others?

(20 min) Basically, there is no association with Covid-19 and any chakra issues we've got. It's simply a function of the normal way in which the Earth responds to us having too many individuals on the planet. If you think of this condition, back in 1900, the start of the 20th century, there was 1.6 billion incarnate souls on the planet, or should we say, 1.6 billion incarnate vehicles on the planet. Hundred and twenty years later, there's 7.8 [billion]. We've increased by a function of five.

So any viruses that naturally occur through being lower frequency would not have spread in the way that it's spread now, so it's like a self-defeating function. The more populous we become, the more chance we get of having viruses affect us that reduce the population. And to be honest, in terms of the whole population, Covid is not going to make much of a dent. So although people do leave their incarnations, and it's traumatic for the families who don't understand the greater reality, in essence, in comparison to the whole population of the Earth and the souls that are incarnating who chose to leave the Earth in this particular way, it's not going to make a massive difference.

So there's no chakra issues associated with it, other than the ability for us to become infected or affected by dysfunction or viruses is a direct result of our frequency level. So if you think of it in this way, when we decided to...or should we say, collectively unconsciously decided that we'd made it in 2012 or just before 2012, and we didn't need to work on ourselves any more, then we started to get complacent. And when we start to get complacent, we slowly start to drop down the frequencies and fall asleep again. That means we start to become more involved with our immersion in our incarnation. Then we lose frequency, we drop down again. So we don't keep the frequency, we can drop down and we can drop down quite significantly. And I've seen some spiritual people become unspiritual in the space of a very short space of time. So when this happens, we start to become more associated with the gross physical and the things that can affect us in the gross physical.

So if you see somebody who is a high frequency individual, they generally don't get colds or coughs or viruses or illnesses, those sorts of things. If you see people who are lower frequency, and they do tend to get those things, because they're attracted to lower frequency interaction. So the higher the frequency, the less dense the gross physical is. The lower the frequency, the more dense the gross physical is. So things like Covid and other viruses, of which there are obviously lots, they're all coronavirus variants.

There's lots of coronavirus variants, they either attach themselves to you or they don't. They can attach themselves to you, if your gross physical incarnate vehicle is low frequency, because it's denser, so it gets stuck to it. If your vehicle or your human body is higher frequency, it passes through the structure, so it doesn't attach to it. It may be difficult for people to understand this and it may be difficult to prove it from sort of a physical or scientific perspective. But these things wouldn't attach themselves, because they can't attach properly. They're out of phase with the frequency of the gross physical aspect of our incarnate vehicle.

Okay, will things change for the better? I'm seeing around...yeah, I think 2040 is the year we're going to start seeing things getting better, start to understand things. In terms of seeing hybrid incarnate vehicles, well, we're already seeing hybrid incarnate vehicles and those are basically in some of the hybrid children, the rainbow children, who can be a mixture of rainbow and indigo or rainbow, indigo and crystal, and the various different variants of hybridization from those.

(25 min) So we're already seeing those anyway. But there's lots of different scenarios right now and we're a bit unstable at the moment, because there's all sorts of things happening around us, that we've sort of let happen. Starting to accept or unaccept and there's that much discord basically on the Earth in all sorts of different ways that we could go, as the text here says, Is this one event stream scenario of a thousand others? Right now we have a lot of different scenarios that we could go down. And what I'm seeing though is the slightly dominant scenario is that we're going to start to understand how we need to interact with each other and take more responsibility for our actions individually and collectively.

Okay, so coming back to the next part, which I'll repeat again.

- We are keenly waiting for the publication of your next book on "Psycho-Spiritual Healing." But in the meantime, please explain a bit more about the link between the frequency levels and the chakras. In "Hands of Light," Barbara Brennan wrote:

"Each auric layer has its own set of seven major chakras, each located in the same place on the physical body. For example, for the fourth chakra, there are really seven chakras, each of a higher frequency band than the lower one. These chakras appear to be nested within each other like nesting glasses."

- What is the "relative frequency" of an etheric body fourth chakra vs. emotional body fourth chakra vs. mental body fourth chakra? Is it graduated and measurable, like 1.4 vs. 2.4 vs. 3.4 or something totally different, given that each frequency band has 12 sub-frequencies (or 144 sub-sub-frequencies)?
- How does that come into play, when we move up the frequencies, as we evolve and ascend, say from the third frequency level to the fourth frequency level? Are these chakras always running and available to us at every level OR do we need to “grow” into them to operate them more efficiently at the next higher level? Please explain.

Well, this part at the bottom of the question there is actually going to be slightly relevant in a moment, because certainly part of the question, because I've looked at this question and I was really quite interested in, because what I see isn't specifically what Barbara's described in the book, "The Hands of Light." And I feel I understand the reason why.

Each chakra, okay, is predominantly represented or represents an energy template, and those energy templates operate on a certain frequency level. So we have the root chakra operating on the first frequency level. We have the sacral chakra on the second frequency level, the solar chakra on the third, etc., etc., so we get the crown chakra operating on the seventh. And so if you look at as a healer, if you're looking at the person and you look at them panfrequencyally, that means you're looking at them from outside of their form and you're seeing all the frequencies together, you see a set of chakras. And you see the energy templates nested together, almost creating one.

When you only focus on one particular frequency level, you see the energy template associated with that frequency level, let's say the fourth frequency level, and you see the heart chakra associated with that. That chakra deals with energies and frequencies associated with that level and feeds the energy template associated with that level. It can't feed the other templates. It doesn't work in that way. What I feel has happened is Barbara is seeing things in a panfrequencyal state, seeing the templates all sort of nested together, and thought that because she's seeing the chakras all in one go, which is what you would do, that she's considered that or feels that she's seeing a bunch of nested chakras as well. But my understanding is that it doesn't work that way.

I also understand that sometimes people relate to the auric layers as well. Well, the auric layers in my understanding are a...they're basically a waste product, you know. When we turn a light bulb on, we get light, because that's what we want a light bulb to do. But the waste product is heat and magnetic radiation. So if you discount the heat and you've got a special camera that is able to look at and register magnetic radiation, you see magnetic waves around the coil of the bulb as well. So in the bulb's condition, you've got the gross physical, you've got the waste product in two ways: magnetic radiation and you've got the heat as well plus the light, which is what we're trying to create with this.

(30 min) So in terms of the auric layers, you've got the...the auric layers are a waste product basically. They're the heat, if you want to call it that. Or should I say more accurately, it's the magnetic radiation associated with that. We'll call it magnetic radiation, because it's easier to understand. It's not that, but it's a good example. So the gross physical and the spirituophysical aspects of the human form, discounting the other three higher functions, which are a step down function to allow the aspect or soul to incarnate into the human vehicle, create the body in totality. Okay, that's the vehicle we incarnate into.

So that's created through seven layers, and each of those seven layers need to be fed energy independently, but collectively together to work. Each of those has a chakra associated with them. When we're looking at things panfrequencyally, we see that the energy templates are nested together, but the chakras appear all as one group of chakras. So I think, I feel that Barbara was maybe seeing things slightly in error, or interpreted things in a different way to what I see, because I see it quite clearly. (Coughing, I have to have a quick drink of water in a bit of a coughing moment...as I see....I got excited obviously.)

As I see it, when the energy comes in through a particular chakra, it energizes the function of that energy template, which is a component part of the incarnate human vehicle we have, of which there's seven component parts plus another higher function to the step down frequencies of [FB] 8, 9 and 10. The function of allowing the body to work and be animated by the soul creates waste. Okay, it's a "lossy" function being here and lossy means that you use energy and you waste energy. We imbibe and we eat food. Some of the energy's taken in as food and we metabolize. It sustains the gross physical aspect of our body. Waste comes out in feces and urine, okay.

In a motor car we put in petrol or diesel, we work the car, it goes forwards. We get carbon emissions and water particulates out of the exhaust pipe and heat in the engine. It's a waste product. So every time or all the time that the chakras are working and they're feeding these energy templates, they're also creating a waste product, an electromagnetic energy field that's associated with that particular frequency level. So each of the auric layers is a waste product associated with the function of the chakra feeding the energy template of the human vehicle.

Okay, so that's what I see there. So it's the energy templates that are nested together as one, not the chakras. Although when you look at the human form in a panfrequential way, you see all of those energy templates nested together and you see one set of chakras. If you isolate a frequency and look at one energy template, let's say the throat at fifth frequency, you see the energy template at the fifth frequency and you only see fifth chakra or the front and rear aspects of the fifth chakra, the throat chakra.

And when I look at this, I understand that, I think Barbara understood it, but she couldn't quite grasp the concept so early, because even in her diagrams in her books, you can see the energy templates in a sort of representation. And then separately there's the auric layers as well. So you can start to understand that this is maybe just a misunderstanding there. So I hope that explains that and what it means. Okay.

So the question about what's the relative frequency of an etheric body? Well, basically the relative frequency of an etheric body is always the first frequency. The mental body is always the frequency of the mental body. So it's using the names associated with the different energy templates, okay. Because these are the names of the energy templates, not the names of the auric layers, so that's something else. But this is fine. I mean the whole point of all this is that we have teachers like Barbara to get us to a certain level, and then if the teacher has been good, we can rise above that teacher. And then those teachers teach others and if they're good, they get their students above them as well.

(35 min) So hopefully, this explains what's going on here. And so each of these particular chakras have little sub-vortices within them with the sub-frequencies as well. So if you like, the tolerance associated with the particular frequency is dealt with by the vortices within the chakra itself. Okay, each of them deals with the sort of frequency slightly above them or slightly below them, so to speak, where it's so you don't get any overlap in terms of the way the chakras work frequentially, because they always separate out at some point, [and] become one rather than a combination of one, two or three. Okay, I hope that helps that question. It's probably not the answer that was expected, but it's certainly what I feel is the best way to answer it. Okay, the next question is from FN and there's three questions here.

3. There are many people who are using spirituality for political gain or to sway non-secular people to support them. For example, there is one running for mayor of London in your area who discusses his experience and awakening with Ayahuasca and others in different countries including the US. (FN)

- How do your guides or Source see these individuals' roles in shaping our current event space? Are they helping in the long run to move us up the frequencies or are they another form of distraction or form of political gamesmanship to get support from expanding nonsecular voters?

Yes. Some people may well have taken ayahuasca. I don't condone the taking of ayahuasca, because it's a mechanical way of achieving very transient connectivity with the greater reality. And that includes things like cocaine and LSD and all these sorts of things. You know, Timothy Leary in the old days, turn on, tune in, drop out. It was all to do with being connected and using drugs as a mechanical aid. The problem is it's unsustainable and it ultimately damages not only the gross physical aspect of our incarnate vehicle, but it also can damage the frequencies associated with the aspect or soul as well.

But this thought here about whether aligning oneself to a particular sect or a spiritual set of individuals, who either believe or know, experientially know about spirituality and the greater reality in some way, shape or form and say: Oh, I've done this and I know a bit more about that and so you can follow me, if you want to...is not new actually. In fact, if you look at or if anybody goes to India, you'll see all over India there's massive, absolutely massive posters of the local politicians and they've all got pictures of Krishna, etc., etc., Babaji and those sort of things in the background to suggest that they are working with these particular gods or gurus, and that they should be trusted as a result of it, which is completely nonsense. So they've got pictures of Ganesh and all that sort of stuff and it's quite bizarre.

So they try to align themselves with spirituality to try and get the spiritual vote. But actually all they are is being very materialistic individuals. So be aware. Use your intuition to understand whether somebody who says that they are spiritual, but are using it for political gain are actually using it for political gain or just showing their spiritual preference or belief system preference. Okay, so just be aware, it can be both. It can be both a bit of a con or it can be real. Okay, just use your intuition. But taking the example of India, they're very blatant with it. Very blatant. I encourage you to go into an Indian website or something and just look at...try and put into Google something, a request for, a search for political advertisement in places like Bangalore or Mumbai or Hyderabad or whatever, and just see if you can see some of the posters online. It's quite good. Next question.

- Many people including in the spiritual community are following groups like QAnon or other similar group or cults? It appears that social media is targeting individuals with a propensity for supporting such groups and feed them propagandas reinforcing their conviction and support.
- How are these groups able to generate such extreme support from individuals who used to be or are pro-environment and pro-raising humanity's consciousness?
- How can such transformation be accomplished? Although each person will take his or her journey, is it advisable to assist our friends who are completely lost to such thought processes? What are Source's suggestions, if any?

(40 min) Well, it's their free will is what's just come through from or what I've just been told straightaway. Again it's this thing about wanting to be in communion all the time. When we are incarnate, we lost our communion, our sense of communion, because when we are disincarnate and within the energies, we're always in communion. We're always in total connectivity with everything and everyone that is around us energetically.

So when we're here, we feel cut off, because of the drastically reduced communicative bandwidth, and so that's what creates the ego, of course. And then we get to the point where we want to feel like we're part of something, part of a community, so we seek communion. And basically, these cults or other groups, etc., etc., feed upon [them]. They understand the basics of working and using certain words to attract members by suggesting that they're going to get things like big love, for instance, or are going to try and change the world by doing this, that and the other. And all they're doing is just basically controlling people's free will. Now it's their free will to be controlled.

So basically, what they do is they feed, they look at, they understand the psychology surrounding certain individuals or certain groups of spiritual individuals, and they use the words that would invoke their interest. And within that, they've also got, if there's a number of them working together, they've also got this synergetic effect associated with the broadcasted energy behind the message and they get attracted to it. So unless you're detached from all of this, you do run the risk of being attracted to this stuff anyway and pulled into it. So you really have to be very, very, very, very careful what you see and hear about. You know, use your intuition: Is this right or is it just misinformation or is it just nonsense?

And the problem with social media is it affects a lot of people very quickly, and as a result of affecting a lot of people very quickly, it gains a synergetic effect very quickly. And that increases the energy surrounding it really quickly as well and massively. And people sense this energy, but they're not able to discern what the energy is, but they sense it as being big and they want to be part of it. So that's sort of the mechanics of how it works. Okay.

How do you change somebody around you you can see going the wrong way and being sucked into one of these things? It's difficult, because you will stand more chance of losing them as a friend by telling them that they've been suckered basically than what you would do, if you're just there for them. The best thing to do is be you, and just continue to be you, and work on your own knowledge base system. Okay, and that's the best way to move forwards, so your energies will in some small way counteract the energies of the other individual, because if you know the truth and you felt the truth and you experience the truth, then you broadcast the truth. And so when these individuals are in your presence and your energies, they will also start to have a little bit of an antidote.

So basically, the best thing to do is just be there as a friend, but don't be pulled into their energies or thought processes. Don't back it up and don't argue against it, because you'll just create a resistance to that and they'll go the opposite way. So it's just basically be there as a friend, knowing that your own direction for you is right and that you're happy with that particular direction as part of your free will. Okay, the next and last question from FN.

- During the November Satsanga you mentioned that in 15-20-30 years, we will become more mature, and act in a service-based way and understand to maintain our environment. However, you also mentioned that currently about 60% of these timelines are heading in the wrong direction in the long run. How do we reconcile these drastic shifts from some harmony and maturity within the next 30 years to much more disharmony within the next 150-200 years (at least in some event spaces)?

(45 min) We need to sort of show that we're thinking and behaving and acting in a way, which is of service to others, of service to our environment and of service to ourselves as a result of that. So we need to remove our selfishness. We need to remove our material desires to allow us to have just the basics just to live in a comfortable way, but not to do more than that. And we need to illustrate this by walking our talk. And in doing that and when somebody asks us, you know, blah, blah, blah, blah, this blah, blah, blah? We say: Well, I'm working in a way, which is in sympathy with the environment and in sympathy with the needs of others around me.

And so as we think, behave and act in this way, and if questioned, we've broadcast it, we don't push it, we just say why we're doing it. We don't enter into any conversation, because sometimes the resulting conversation can be resulting in friction or even resistance later, so it could be detrimental. We just sort of put the seed out there and that's it. The seed will grow. Even in unfertile areas, we have plants growing in deserts and in rocky areas like lava based landscapes. So we just need to make sure that we maintain our own equilibrium and we start to work in a way, which is...even if you have a coarse sticky [?] environment, but we work with it. We maintain it and it's hard, but we just need to maintain our own higher frequency and just show that there's a better way by being that better way. And eventually we'll catch up.

Okay, that's the way, it's difficult. But I'm seeing it's a good chance of, you know, 40% chance of doing it, 40% chance is better than no % chance. But that's only because right now we've got a level of like complete disharmony and confusion on the planet. And we've got lots of broadcasting like from Sir David Attenborough saying that we're losing the flora and fauna at an alarming rate, which we are. We always have been. But like everything else, this thing is growing exponentially. We need to change away from fossil fuels. We need to change away from dangerous methods of creating electricity. We need to be more in harmony with the environment, and use the environment and manufacture things in a way, which isn't polluting.

And we need to work with each other, supporting each other and being of service to each other and also allow others to respect each other and respect the work that's done for them. Okay, so it's really the case of not letting people just perpetuate themselves on benefits all the time, because they're not actually gaining any respect for themselves or those around them. It's helping them to become self-sustaining as well. There's an old saying: You can give a man a fish and you'll feed him for a day. Giving him a fishing rod and teaching him how to fish, and he'll feed himself for the rest of his life. And that's the way to think about it.

Okay, we've got questions now from OM. The last series of questions: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. Oh, 5, I think. And some of these could be quite complex answers actually. OM by the way is the lovely lady who's just finished the translation of "The History of God" into Japanese and is potentially looking at another book and may well be able to encourage others to also act as translators into Japanese. Fantastic, fantastic person.

4. Are you experiencing samadhi when you are communicating with SEs, the OM, and the Origin? How does samadhi feel like? (OM)

There are times, when I do, but basically I get enough information to be here and there at the same time. So it's not full samadhi or full transcendental existence. It's a bridge between the two, so depending upon where I am, I'm either in it or outside of it and seeing through a window, if that makes any sense. I dip in, as I need to, because I need to be able to work the computer here. So I type things straight into the computer. I enter into this state of beingness and the information comes, and sometimes I'm just there for ages trying to work out how I can convey this concept, which is undecipherable into some way, which we can understand. And sometimes it comes quite flowing. Sometimes I'm there immersed and it takes a long time to come back. And sometimes I'm in this sort of halfway house, where I'm looking through a window into that environment. Okay.

(50 min) So how does samadhi feel like? Well, it's undecipherable basically. Imagine being able to see spherically. Okay, so you're not seeing forwards in your eyes, you're seeing up, down, left, right, forwards and backwards at the same time. But also being able to communicate with other entities instantaneously. Also being connected to everything in an omnipresent, omniscient way, so everything is there. Imagine being able to before we've even asked the question get the answer. Imagine that before you've even considered or finished your thought about where you want to go to, you're there. Imagine about when you want to create something before you've even finished the thought about what you're going to create, it is created. That's an example of what samadhi is like or what transcendental connectivity is like.

Transcendental meditation basically is just another way of saying astral traveling. And samadhi is sort of a similar thing to that, but when you move above, so you do get some level of connectivity associated with that. But if you move out of the frequencies associated with the human vehicle and the physical universe and go into the multiverse, then you get more and more expansivity. It's like being ultimately expansive. It's like being the drop of water, the milliliter of water that's dropped in the sea and you're suddenly the sea. Imagine being the whole sea, when you're here, you're a milliliter of water. And going from being that milliliter of water to being the whole sea. And being the whole sea, not just part of the whole sea. That's what it's like. It's undescrivable. It really is difficult to describe. Next question, because this lady is very intuitive in her own right, very connected in her own right. Very sensitive energetically.

- I had a chance to see an aspect of the Source, but It did not look like a sphere or a white old man as described in The History Of God. It looked like a panfrequential piece of structure containing everything. I had no clue what It was, so I had to ask you to find out. I always thought that God would appear in forms that we can understand, so it puzzled me. How does It decide which forms to take for Its children?

It depends upon our education and what we can cope with and how we can understand it. We also have an overlay. When we look at things, we translate things based upon our experience. I've done this before. If we look at a giraffe and we've never looked at a giraffe before, what do we call it? If you've not seen anything before that looks like a giraffe, we probably won't see it at all, so we see a white screen.

If we've seen a dog that's got long legs and a horizontal body and a slightly larger neck, we'd probably call the giraffe a form of dog, because the dog's got four legs, the giraffe's got four legs. The dog's got a tail, the giraffe's got a tail. The dog's got a snout, the giraffe's got a snout. The giraffe's got ears, the dog's got ears. The giraffe's got a coat, the dog's got a coat. The patterns are different, but the patterns are different on dogs anyway. So you start to see how we can start to translate with our total incarnate experience what we're experiencing in terms of what we're seeing. Okay and then create a translation, which is in error. It's only when we're told that a giraffe is a giraffe because of x, y and z that we start to understand, Oh, that's a giraffe.

And that's the same with connectivity with Source. It will connect to us in a way that we can translate or work with. Or that it feels it can expand us into for connectivity. So it's basically allowing us to expand or connect with it, based upon our capability of communicating or being expansive. Okay, I hope that explains it. Next question.

- When I am listening to your Satsanga, sometimes other beings/entities "highjack" your radio either partially or entirely and takes longer to listen. There seem to be some sort of background communication going on, but I have no clue. Why is it happening, and what are they doing? (My internet connection was fine at that time, and I tested the same Satsangas for few times afterward and found that there was nothing wrong with the recording, my PC, or my audio.)

You're basically picking up the connectivity between me and everything else. So you're seeing there's a plethora of help out there. It's not just me that gets help. Of course, everybody gets help who are working to help other incarnate individuals see beyond what they are from a transient perspective. And so you're seeing other entities that are helping. You might be seeing other Om if they are there. They are very rare, very transient, of course, but you might be seeing some of those. But it's quite likely you're seeing other entities that are helping as well. And as a result, they may be sort of delighted by what's being given and they might be delighted in the energy that's being broadcast as a result of the subject matters that I'm talking about. Because it's not just the physical words, you know, the spoken words that are being broadcast, it's the energy surrounding the information that's going out as well. And the concepts and even when I'm being shown there's geometrical shapes that are being broadcast as well, which contain other data associated with it.

(55 min) So there's an awful lot going on in the background. And they're there to help all of you understand in a deeper level what's going on. Even if you don't physically experience any connectivity or anything coming to you, it will be being absorbed in your beingness, in your aspect or soul whilst you're incarnate. Okay, so they're there to help us all understand — me as well. Okay, so it's good. They're all there to help.

They're there to help others and I'm being told right now, they also provide a level of different forms of understanding, so different people can understand it in the way they're supposed to understand it rather than the one way I'm broadcasting as well. So it gives a plethora of different ways of understanding it, so people can connect and then understand it in a way that they can understand it rather than failing to understand, because they can't understand the way I have particularly spoken in a particular way. Okay, right. There's two questions left. One is a biggish question, one is a small question.

- Question on crystal/mineral mining. I see a lot of stores selling minerals and crystals for profit. I've heard that those are by-products of mining precious jewels and rare metals for various electronic devices. But some of them are obviously not by-products of such. I understand that crystals and minerals can evolve faster by human interactions, but miners probably did not ask nature spirits there if they could have them in the first place... I have started to wonder if removing these "by-products" can cause an energetic imbalance in local environment, because it's like taking EVERYTHING from there... How does crystal/mineral mining affect the local environment?

Clearly, they have their own level of sentience associated with them, because there are certain True Energetic Selves that don't have the same sentient quality or sentient weight that we do, so they are embarking on the evolutionary cycle from a different level, a significantly lower level. But the energies that are there help to maintain the environment that is the Earth eco-structure, the eco-sphere that is the Earth. And so removing them does upset the imbalance, but on the other side, I'm being shown that it does, shall we say, harmonize other areas as well. It creates an average effect, and an averaging effect.

So although miners should really be asking for permission to change the location of such minerals or crystals, when they get sold basically all over the world, they are creating an overall mean energy system. Don't forget that crystalline structures are in connectivity with each other irrespective of where they are. So they're creating a network, as they're being sold all over the world, they're increasing the network of energy associated with them. It's a bit like it smoothes out the peaks and troughs of the overall frequency of the Earth.

And so in doing so, although we need to ask for permission, the movement of them from one place to another place, specifically if there's a lot of these crystals in one location, and removing a chunk of them doesn't make a massive difference to their overall frequency there or energies there, then moving what's taken out and moving them around the Earth is actually creating a harmonization and balancing effect. So it can be slightly detrimental to the location, it can be a positive effect to other areas where they move into. So it can be good. The last question.

- If a cat loved catnip so much while incarnating, does it develop certain addiction when it evolved and incarnated as a human?

Catnip is basically a flower that cats become really addicted to, because it's almost like a marijuana for cats, if you want to call it that. Yes, it doesn't help them. If an animal soul or group or True Energetic Self eventually changes into a higher level of evolution and jumps the evolutionary barrier to become on the lowest rung of the human evolutionary level, then they won't have been addicted.

Basically, they have to go through the ability to master certain things in their incarnation same as we do. And that can take thousands of incarnations from a group based perspective. And so when they've also mastered that particular function of incarnation, that level, which includes being able to walk past catnip and not go crazy over it in this instance, or needing to sniff it or roll around in it or eat it, for instance, then they can go to the next level.

(1 hr) So they have to also master incarnation from their perspective, as we do, before they can move to the next level and incarnate as human beings or other entities of our sentient weight and genre and sentient quality in other locations within the physical universe. Okay, so addictions are addictions and it's karma, so they can also get karma as well. And they can get karma in terms of how they interact with human beings, specifically human beings that aren't very nice to them.

Okay, so that's the end of the questions. I've got some more questions that are available from JM and we're going to put those in the first place in January, which is going to be on the 30th of January, so it's a bit of a gap between now and then.

Part 3. Meditation

Okay, we're going to go through the end of meet meditation, which is a meditation to open everybody's minds and hearts to the greater reality and change how we live and interact. You can do this meditation as often as you like. It's a very nice meditation and it creates a lovely energy. It will definitely change the way you think, behave and act and that'll be broadcast and be absorbed by those around you as well.

Please download the high quality MP3 File to do the guided meditation with Guy Steven Needler via his website or blog (meditation starts at around 1:01 min).

(1:18) Closing comments: Okay, so thank for listening to this World Satsanga on Saturday, the 19th of December 2020. Thank you for participating. Thank you for adding to the energy. And I send Source's love and God's love to you all over this next Christmas period. And I'm looking forward to sharing the information, as it comes, from Source and from the questions of those individuals who sent questions in. On our next Satsanga, which is the 30th of January 2021. And let's visualize and create an abundance of positive change for 2021. Namaste. Blessings and God's love to you all." END

NOTE: I have prepared a Searchable pdf document with ALL World Satsanga Lectures, Questions and Answers collated from 2016-2020 to make it easier for us to see what questions have already been asked in previous Satsangas and what answers were given at the time. This will allow us to ask NEW questions or ask similar questions from a different angle after reviewing what we already know. This document is over 600 pages, so don't try to print it out.

You can go to Needler's website (www.beyondthesource.org) to find the document at this URL:
