

January 30, 2021 - Pre-Recorded World Satsanga for The Kevin Moore Show

Transcript of Pre-Recorded World Satsanga by Guy Steven Needler:

"Welcome everybody to this World Satsanga held on the 30th of January 2021 in conjunction with Kevin Moore and The Moore Show. And Kevin continues to do some fantastic work with his Moore Talk and the "They Call Us The Channelers" series on YouTube. Fantastic work. Do check him out and see some of those episodes. There's some really good stuff on there showing you the different qualities of individuals who channel or who are psychic or mediums, etc. those sorts of things.

Okay, so a new year and Happy New Year to you all, because it's the first I've had a chance to speak to you all. I've got a lot of questions. As you can imagine, there's a lot that got carried over from December's Satsanga and a lot has been passed onto me, so let's do our best to get through them, if we can do.

And so let's go through the agenda first. The first part is a short talk by myself on how to avoid being pulled into conspiracy theories and misinformation. And I'll guess that's a really relevant thing right now, because there's lots and lots and lots of things flying around about things like vaccination, specifically with the Covid-19 problem worldwide, whether there is something going on with Covid-19 or whether it's a bigger government, world government or uber government, so to speak, very hidden manipulation of the general population of the Earth. But these are all things that are flying around, so we're going to look at how we can avoid being pulled into them.

Then we're going to go through all of the questions that were sent to me, which is about 3.5 pages, so thank you very much for those questions. I had a quick look through. Clearly, I don't look at them properly until the Satsanga, so everything comes out instantaneously in a clean channeled way rather than me deliberating over them, so you get it as it comes, which is good. That's warts and all, of course.

And then we're going to do a meditation at the end, which is a meditation to create peace in the world, because we really do need it in all sorts of different directions. We need to sort of reconsolidate ourselves and start to realize that we're a world civilization and not little pockets of civilization in various different parts of the world we call countries or even locations within countries. We need to start to think about becoming properly globalized rather than we think we're globalized, but we're actually not. Okay. So let's have a look at the first part.

Part 1. Lecture on "How to avoid being pulled into conspiracy theory and misinformation?"

Well, the first thing to notice is that generally these things start with a "What do you think comment?" from somebody you're talking about. And as soon as you hear these sorts of comments: What do you think or I think or I'm not happy with or Well, such and such is not doing a very good job, what do you think? Then you have to start to back away from it, because then you're starting to get into the opinions of an individual, who may or may not be educated in the right or wrong way. And the education being the reading of misinformation or the hearing of misinformation or the viewing of misinformation from various different sources.

And it's difficult for people to understand what misinformation is, because there's a lot of information out there that is misinformation, but it has got an awful lot of truth interspersed around it. So we start to see that there is some good information in the misinformation, but that's the anchor point. That's the lure, that's the light to the moth, so to speak. It's what brings us in, because there are bits that are true, and therefore, we think that because these bits are true, and they're known to be true, then everything else is being true. So that's another way of realizing that, if something is particularly true and then there's something else around on the side and there's no justification for it, then you know that it's conspiracy. And so you should back off and save your frequencies by not getting involved.

Getting involved in discussions on conspiracy theories perpetuates them, amplifies them, and creates an energy of attractivity around them, so they spread and they sort of fractally manifest and duplicate and triplicate and quadruplicate, etc., etc., in all sorts of different ways. It's really about keeping your own energy and that's really, really important. One of the things that we should do is use our intuition, our clairsentience, if you want to call it that, our cosmic thinking, our cosmic knowledge or our state of understanding or unquantifiable knowingness that something is right or wrong.

(5 min) So when we start to work and communicate about various different conspiracy theories, we start to enter into basically a gossip mode of some sort. It's a different level of gossip. Rather than talking about one particular individual that we don't like and collectively don't like, and therefore, deride them, which is totally wrong, because they are what they are. They're another soul who is struggling through their incarnation to experience, learn and evolve within the constraints of their particular life plan, doing it the best they can and in the way they can, and sometimes they go off track and sometimes we go off track. But we should love everybody in the same way.

So when we start to think or hear this happening, you know, the starting mode of conspiracy theory, we should move away, because it is really just another form of gossip. And also look at information and just know whether it's right or wrong. Again use your intuition, use what your heart tells you to say. You know, is this right? Say it to yourself. You don't have to say it to everybody else, because as soon as you start to say it to somebody else, you start to create a condition where they're being pulled into a conspiracy theory that you're discussing within yourself, but you've verbalized, so to speak. So it's keeping yourself knowing what you know. It's almost like creating your own reality bubble. We all do this anyway subconsciously. But this is a conscious effort to create that which you know.

And you have to think of it this way: is it going to affect me and what I do? Does it stop me from doing what I'm doing? Does it make what I'm doing more difficult? Does it really change the way I am? And if the information that is being thrown at us doesn't do any of these things, because it won't in real terms, because we are individualized sentience in a body that's doing a job. We've got a job to do. We've got families to raise. We've got interests we have. We have spiritual progression, if we're that way inclined.

And we simply have to realize that in general these things don't affect us. And if they affect us in a minor way, for instance, with the lock downs with the Covid-19 virus, then we simply work with it. And it will eventually disappear, because other people might be doing it under duress or in agreement with the rules and regulations. But it creates this, Well, I'm not going to stop myself from doing what I'm doing, but I'm going to do it within the rules and the spirit of what the rules are. So I'm going to continue my way of being, but not break any rules, which is fine. And that's the way to do it is to sort of be in your own bubble, keeping doing what you're doing, but making sure that you're not affecting anybody else. So we can continue to work within our own interests, so to speak, but not affecting the interests of anybody else, because of breaking any rules or regulations that are either permanently or temporarily bestowed upon us.

So create your own bubble of reality, which is basically your own event space. And you know, this is doing it consciously. Normally, it's done subconsciously. Normally, it's done as an automatic function of the way event space works, which is we create extra different event spaces or realities based upon our thought processes and our decisions based upon our challenges. So we can choose as part of those challenges to just be okay with what's going on around us and keep on doing what we're doing. We can still read our books. We can still play football with the kids in the garden. We can still go for a walk as long as we keep away from people. We can still communicate with our family and friends over various different modalities that we've got — telephones, mobile phones, videos, such as Zoom, Skype, Botim, Whatsapp, Wechat, QQ, all these different things. They're there for us to continue to communicate.

And so we can do this and still maintain our own energies. Because maintaining your energies assures you're again stopping this potential to be sucked into a conspiracy theory and then create this condition, where you're pulled into a thought process, which is physically derived, because conspiracy theories only occur in the physical universe — mostly in the third frequency, where they can also of course be created elsewhere. But the higher the frequency we go, the less chance we do this sort of things, because the more exposed to the higher frequencies and the understanding of who and what we are, so we don't need to create any conspiracy theories, because we know what the greater reality is in various levels of expansivity, depending upon our frequency that we incarnate into.

(10 min) So stay within your own thought processes. Don't get pulled into somebody else's. Use your intuition to judge whether it's right or wrong, what bits are right, what bits are wrong. And just look at the facts really, because a lot of the facts are being twisted and turned upside down and backwards and forwards or being selectively used. I can remember a long time ago, when I was at university doing various different things, and one of them was to create a statistical report based upon the evidence of the experiments I was doing. And somebody said to me, one of the statisticians said to me: Well, you do know that there's lies down lies statistics, which basically said you can use statistics correctly or you can twist them by using only a certain part of the statistics or using only chunks of statistics that sort of suits your argument.

So again, just look at the information that's there. Use your own intuition to judge which statistics are right and which statistics aren't being used correctly and don't get involved in the thought process of getting angry about it or discussing it or phoning somebody up and venting your frustrations about it, because that creates again the perpetuation of the conspiracy theory or the dissatisfaction with the way that the localized leaders and the country based leaders and the world leaders are handling these things. They don't know what we do. We don't know what they're doing, but it doesn't matter what they're doing.

As long as we don't create karma by attaching ourselves to the physical, and of course, being involved in conspiracy theories is part of that, then we're okay. They can carry on with their karma, because if we start to involve ourselves in conspiracy theories, we enter into a group of individuals, who are thinking in the same way. Remember birds of a feather flock together. And that's the same with spiritual work. Keep high frequency. If you enter into a discussion with people, who are talking about conspiracy theories, we enter into group karma, because we're anchoring ourselves in the energies surrounding something, which is...probably can't be proven, has some elements of truth in there, but has an awful lot of some elements with some form of control in there.

And some of these conspiracy theories are designed to control us, to create a level of control in a different way. So keep your distance from all this stuff. Stay high frequency. Stay meditating. Stay in a position psycho-spiritually where you know where you are, and you understand what's happening around you, and you're happy with your condition, and you continue to do what you do in a way, which is consistent with any limitations associated with location, environment and circumstance. Okay, a bit sort of global and a bit sort of nebulous, but basically, it's designed to make us think. Sit up and take notice. Think and really be in a position, where we are not accepting everything, but we don't need to accept it. We don't need to discuss it, we just let it be in the background. And that's the best way for these things. Just let it go in the background.

You know, when I look out of my window and I look across the Bristol Channel to Somerset from South Wales, I don't know what they're doing unless I zoom in. I don't know what they're doing in Weston-super-Mare or Nailsea, because I'm not interested. And that's the way we should look at it. What they're doing doesn't affect you here and now. And that's the way to think about it. That's the way you make sure that you observe a few small rules of not getting involved in something, which is ultimately going to link you into a group karmic condition.

Okay, well, thank you for listening to that and I hope it made some sense and I hope it helped in some small way, which is always useful. It's useful for me as well to go through it. Okay, we've got lots of questions here and JM has got ten. And these are all passed on from the December Satsanga, so I'm going to hopefully read these out without making a mess of it. But basically, I'll try to answer these in as clear and as succinct a way as possible. I'll put my teeth back in. This is based upon "The Curators" book by the way. So the first one is...

Part 2. Questions and Answers

1. In "The Seeders" chapter of "The Curators," you discuss with SE1 the difference between a being and an entity. Per SE1, a being is created sentient whereas an entity develops sentience on its own, not having it bestowed by another being. Per this definition, the Origin and the OMs are entities (and who else?), but since they were all created by the Origin, the Source Entities are beings, not entities, per the definition. Seems like "Source Being 1" is a more proper thing to call our Source Entity, rather than "Source Entity 1", although I will continue to use Source Entity in my meditations. Do you concur? (JM)

(15 min) Actually, I think there's a bit of a typing error here to be honest. So I'm going to slightly adjust it. An entity is sentience, which is individualized from another entity or being. So a Source Entity is a Source Entity, because it's created from the individualized sentience and energy from the Origin. And our True Energetic Selves are entities as well, because those are created from the individualization of sentience and energy from the Source Entity. And our souls or our aspects are the same, and so are shards.

A being is one where the energy has gone through a level of Darwinian based evolution, to give an example, where it's created its own sentience as a result of going through a number of different processes, which are described in "The Origin Speaks" called "The Road to Sentience." And the being is therefore created through its own evolution, so to speak, of its own energies that go through the process of creating levels of minor intelligence or attractivity of minor intelligence, consciousness, awareness, self-awareness, creativity, and ultimately sentience. And then the recognition that sentience is and can be detached from the energy that gave birth to it, so to speak.

The thing is that the Origin is a being. So the Origin is self-derived. It's sentience that has been created as a function of its own evolutionary path, even though there was some assistance from Event Space. And Event Space gave up its own potential to be the dominant sentience recognizing that the Origin could be a bigger, much more complete level of sentience, and therefore, became the dominant being that allow the opportunity for the Sources to be created as a function it wanting to understand itself better.

So the Origin is a being [not an entity]. Source Entity is an entity [not a being]. See how easy it is to get confused. I'll start again. Origin is a being. The Source Entity is an entity. Our True

Energetic Selves are entities. Aspects are entities. Shards are entities. There are clearly other levels of sentience that are created and are classified as beings. And there are some Sources that are self-generated, so to speak, as a function of energies collecting together and then going through the processes of "The Road to Sentience." Okay, so that's the way to think of it. '

Origin is a being, that created the Source Entities as entities, that created True Energetic Selves as entities, that created aspects as entities, that created shards as entities. Okay, but there are bits and pieces in between. Okay, next question...

- I read in a different book that the Earth is quarantined by being at the far end of our galaxy and by being close to the edge of our universe. Are we really close to the edge of our universe? How close, like how many AUs (astronomical units)?

My understanding is that the Earth, the location of the solar system is right close to the end of one of the spiral arms of our Milky Way, the galaxy called the Milky Way. And that galaxy is basically very close to the edge. What I would call...

If you think as an example, think of the physical universe as a sphere, it's not, but it's something we can use as a way of using an illustration to help us understand it. It's more amorphous than that. But if you think of it as a sphere, and we have north, south, east and west (I'm getting north and south dyslexia) and then forwards and backwards, we are forwards south-east and sort of close to the sort of boundary of where the collective frequencies that create the physical universe are clearly in Full Dimension 1. And before it goes to the next jump in frequency, it makes it into the second Full Dimension.

(20 min) Okay, so that's pretty much how close we are.

- How close, like how many AUs (astronomical units)?

I'm told we're 259 galaxies away from the edge, from this demarcation line. How's that? 259 galaxies away. Okay, that's galaxies that we can see in the first three frequencies, by the way, because there are other galaxies in between. It's just that we can't see them, because we're not at the right frequency. But if we had a telescope that existed on the 12th frequency, we'd notice that the physical universe is absolutely packed with galaxies and different environmental areas that support the potential to incarnate at different frequential levels. Okay.

- Just what is the edge of our universe?

It's the demarcation between the first Full Dimension and the second Full Dimension. It's the difference between the 12th frequency and the 13th frequency. The 13th frequency is a different level of frequency. It's a jump upwards in frequency and it's just enough to allow the ability for a self-contained simultaneously occurring universe to be derived within the frequencies and the subsequent energies, whereas in the first Full Dimension, they're so low that they're all required together.

So basically, what we have is a condition where there's a quantum leap in terms of the finitude or the ability to create an environment associated with each jump in frequency. When we get to the 12th frequency and then go into the 13th, it's a massive jump. This is why there's twelve frequencies required to create the physical universe. And the physical universe is the only universe in the first Full Dimension. But in the second Full Dimension, there's 36 universes, because each of the frequencies is a quantum leap in finitude, and therefore, the ability to house content.

- What is immediately beyond the edge of our universe? Something? Nothing?

Well, basically, it's like a substructure. There's a bit of a...I can't even call it a gap, it's a demarcation between one dimension and another dimension. And within the dimensions, they're held together by a substructure. And that substructure is the structure behind and within and without the structure that we understand as the multiverse. And so it's the structure that is clearly part of the Source, but is ultimately part of the Origin as well. And so there is structure, energetic structure, frequential structure, but it's still part of the multiverse, but it's a different part of the multiverse, so to speak. Consider it the framework. Okay. This is quite good, because it links into the next question.

- In "The Architects," SE1 states that you have been working with it, its peers and The Origin "for long enough to be supremely confident in this information..." Are you?

I don't feel unconfident. I don't feel uncomfortable with it. It feels right. And that's the thing. If something doesn't feel right, you shouldn't be broadcasting it. If there's any doubts about it, you shouldn't be broadcasting about it in any way, shape or form. If there is a difference between one person's information and somebody else's information, we have to consider the fact that maybe it's the same thing, but said in a different way or maybe there's an error somewhere. If there's any function of the information that could be classified as an error, then it's not broadcast. And for me, it feels right. It feels true, so I don't have any problems with the information at all, so I'm very confident in it. Next question...

- SE1 tells you in "The Architects" that you are not in the evolutionary cycle, but of course, the rest of us all are. So no evolution for you, Mr. OM?

No, well, it's interesting, because a lot of the OM don't get involved in the evolutionary cycle. And the way to not being involved in the evolutionary cycle is not to be involved in anything that creates things. Now Dolores Cannon was very good at identifying that the fact that people, who are here to do a job and a job that is above and beyond the normal role or life plan of an incarnate individual to experience, learn and evolve generally don't have things like children, because children are karmic.

(25 min) And so children are karmic, because you've created something. You've created a responsibility for something. So when we create something, we are responsible for it irrespective of what it is, where it is, what frequency it's in, what dimension it's in. So an awful lot of the OM...well, most of the OM don't get involved with anything that involves some form of creation. Sometimes we get stuck into it and we get involved with it without knowing. But in a lot of things, we are doing work and potentially it's for nothing.

Although there's another question further on down, which is going to sort of be interesting counterpoint for it as well, because there are some OM that do enter into the evolutionary cycle. And again even if an OM is incarnate and doing things, which could potentially create karma, they are not, shall we say, burdened by karma or burdened by anything associated with evolution. Now just because an entity is not in the evolutionary cycle, it doesn't mean they don't evolve. And if you look at some of the curators and certainly the guides and helpers, who help souls to incarnate, they're not in the evolutionary cycle per se, but they do get evolution as a function of working with those entities who incarnate, because it's sort of given to them. It's like shared, so to speak. So although OM aren't in the evolutionary cycle, they do evolve. It's just that their evolution is, shall we say, not even automatic, it just happens as a function of just being with everything else evolving. Okay.

- In "The Architects," you describe "Backfill" people as "transient individuals that were created by us all to 'fill in' the gaps in the background of our existence and experience." Do we actually, consciously create these people? If so, why do I have no recollection of this activity?

The backfill people are a different quality of sentience. They're a different TES (True Energetic Self/Higher Self/Oversoul). They're a different soul type, for example, and they are here. By transient, it means that they are not going to go into the vast tranch [Fr. tranche] of incarnations that the vast general population of the Earth and the vast general population of the physical universe at all these frequencies are going to go through.

They are experiencing individualized free will, but they will evolve in a completely different way. They won't be going through the process of getting rid of lots of karma, although they will accrue karma, of course. But they will have to be in a position, where they have fulfilled the role of backfilling, recreating the environment, the population of the environment, so that those other incarnate aspects or souls or shards in fact can do the work they're doing without the shock of seeing the population dramatically reduce, as people go up the frequencies. Because once we go up the frequencies, we do actually zone out, so to speak, of the perceptual range of those individuals who are staying at the lower frequencies.

So their role is to be here and create a balance of population, whilst the rest of us move into the next level or ascend to the next level either within this incarnation or outside of the incarnation. And so they are not part of our creation. We haven't created them. They are a function of the original creative decision process that the Source Entity made, when it split out and individualized countless billions of different units of sentience and energy to create all the TESs etc. So we haven't created them, Source has created them.

They were part of the original manifestation of individualized sentience. But they won't be here as long as we are, because they're only here whilst we move to the next level. Okay. But they still benefit. They still evolve in their own way and they will still evolve as a function of being here. But they won't have to go around all the different depths and details of karma that we do. And to some extent you can see that these individuals are...they're attracted to karmic things.

(30 min) They're attracted to materialism. They're attracted to thought processes that are low frequency. So low frequency thoughts, behaviors and actions are sort of almost part of their beingness. But that's okay, because what I'm being told now is they're sort of spared a lot of the recovery processes that most of us have to go through to remove the karmic links with other incarnate individuals and with ourselves as a function of us working with certain circumstances in certain ways with certain individuals as well in certain environments. Okay, thank you for that question. It's very good.

- In "The Enders," you describe an alternate World War II Event Space" where all forms of civilization have all but disappeared." My father fought in World War II, so is there a version of him that experienced all the destruction of those extra bombs and the beginning of the end of life on earth? Did he ever exist in that reality?

We all exist in all of the different versions of realities that we would potentially have made a decision to be part of. So when we incarnate and we are in a position to make a decision, we go from one particular place to another in terms of our understanding of what we want to do. So for instance, if I get out of a bus and I turn right, I could have turned left or I could have maybe gone straight on if we were at another juncture. So there's potentially one or two and maybe three or maybe even four decisions that we can make. And as we make one decision, we feel that our consciousness, our sentience goes in that one decision, in that one way.

But in reality with event space, it splits out and there's another version of us that goes in another way. And another version goes into the third way. And all of those other individuals, who choose to be in that particular event space as well also enter it. And so we have duplicates of ourselves, triplicates of ourselves, quadruplicates of ourselves, etc., etc., etc., to potentially thousands of ourselves that are experiencing the thousands of different event spaces that are created individually and collectively and sort of globally, so to speak, to experience all of the different sort of variations.

And so there are going to be variations, where World War II didn't happen, where all was sorted out and we lived in a completely different state of civilization and interaction with each other. And in the event where that particular decision process that created it, that resulted in war didn't happen, or maybe Hitler didn't get to chancellor of Germany or something else happened, you know, maybe the war didn't happen. And I know we do have a case, where the war didn't happen, but where other wars potentially happened later. So to answer that question, yes, he was part of that and other multiple different realities that are different variations upon that particular war unfortunately. Okay, next question. There's two more from JM.

- When explaining about "The Recorders," you address the Source Entity and reference "when we talk in private." Are these longish discussions, or compared to the conversations you have with SE in public, are your private discussions merely brief episodes.

To answer the question, they can be in depth or they can be momentary. Sometimes when they're momentary as well, huge concepts can be given to me and although it can seem like a couple of seconds, in terms of an interaction or reception of a concept or idea or knowledge, it can take quite a long time to understand it in some level of detail that allows me to broadcast it to the general spiritual public, metaphysical public. So sometimes it can be very small, but yield an awful lot of information, and sometimes it can be a long time and yield what appears to be a small amount of information.

So really it just depends. It depends upon the information. It depends upon my state of connectivity, how interested I am, what I'm doing at the time, and whether I can basically sit down and create the type of link that's required to support the information that's coming. And generally I can, but usually this information comes in random ways at times. When I'm writing the books, I'm focused on writing the books and I'm focused on going in the direction I'm being told to go in to support the subjects in the chapters that I'm writing. But in essence, there are things that happen just randomly, when I'm walking.

(35 min) For instance, maybe I'm cycling or maybe I'm walking down the street or maybe I'm meditating or maybe I'm sitting in a chair watching television, for example. I don't watch television much to be honest. But it's one of these things where things suddenly come to you. And sometimes they come to me, when there's no blockages, when there's no resistance. It's like now the door's open and in it comes. And then I'll go, Oh, that makes sense, okay, right. I'll remember that and I'll write it down somewhere. And sometimes it comes into a book and sometimes it doesn't. Okay, a good question. Thank you.

- In "The Recorders," SE1 specifies the number of cycles that the Origin has left to experience in getting us all to become Source Entities as "over one thousand million" as a ballpark figure. Since we are currently on cycle three, this measure of the passage of time/events seems unachievable and staggers the imagination. Am I understanding this correctly?

When we are in the lower frequencies of the physical universe or the lowest frequencies associated with the multiverse within Source, we experience things in a completely different way to what we do normally, when we're in the energetic. A whole lifetime, you know, a lifetime of say 120 years is not even a blink of an eye in the energetic and it's already happened. And so these vast, shall we say, periods of existence are sort of arbitrary in real terms, because when we're here, we've created a metric to measure the passage of events, so to speak. But when we're in the energetic, it's sort of there. We can move from event to event, it's not an issue.

But the thing is that when we go through an evolutionary cycle, we do learn and we do evolve; hence, the evolutionary cycle moving on to the next evolutionary cycle. So as we move from one evolutionary cycle to another evolutionary cycle, everything that's been experienced in the previous evolutionary cycle and all the evolutionary content and progression that's been accrued in the first evolutionary cycle adds towards the ability to navigate through the next evolutionary cycle in a better, more robust, more efficient, more complete way.

So as we move through an evolutionary cycle, we start to accelerate faster. So we go through one evolutionary cycle to the next, and to the next, to the next till eventually an evolutionary cycle will be not even a blink of an eye in comparison to so many million Earth years, for example, or trillion Earth years, for example. So that's the thing to notice is that as we go from one cycle to the next, things happen faster. In fact, we're just starting the third evolutionary cycle, but in comparison to the amount of time (I'll use the word "time" in this instance) taken to experience the second evolutionary cycle, we're shifting. We're really going really, really quickly in comparison. And we're going at warp speed, to use a pun, in the third evolutionary cycle compared to what we were doing in the first evolutionary cycle.

So as we move to the fourth evolutionary cycle, when we get there, we'll progress and pass significantly faster than the third evolutionary cycle. So it seems like an unimaginably or unachievably long period to go through, but it's eventually going to be extremely fast. And that's the benefit of evolution. Thank you, JM. Excellent questions. I'm going to be thinking about those for quite some time. We've got more questions now. One sort of very down to earth one.

2. What are some foods that best serve the heart chakra? Any specific fruits/vegetables/herbs? (AB)

I'm told peppers are good, the large sort of apple shaped peppers are pretty good. And I'm also told, believe it or not, that jalapeños are good as well. So be careful how you eat these things, because they can be quite warm. Anything else with the heart chakra? Apples are good and some edible plants are also good apparently. I'm just having a look around my information. This is coming from Source, by the way, channeled information rather than looking at a book. I'm just having a look and see...spinach is good as well apparently, iron. So these are physical things.

(40 min) Don't forget the chakras aren't physical as such. They're not gross physical anyway, they're energetic. And so the frequencies that they work with are their best "food" for example. The fourth frequency is best for the heart chakra. The third frequency is best for the solar chakra. The second frequency is best for the sacral chakra, etc., etc., down to the root and up towards the crown chakra. So really the frequencies and the energies associated with the frequency that they're designed to work with is the best for them.

But there are some physical things that give good energies associated with the gross physical, that actually can percolate over to some of the frequencies that are associated with the chakras. Not many are I have to add, but in real terms what I've just mentioned for the heart chakra, those things are good. I'm also told cabbage is good as well. Also notice these things are raw by the way. They're not cooked, they're raw. You keep them raw. Okay, that will help.

Okay, a question from WP and actually, this happened before Christmas and it's about a friend, a long term friend. I shan't name the individual, but I'll go through the question, which is quite a good question and it's actually quite relevant to things that are happening to people with some families having a lot of issues with family members leaving the incarnation abruptly as a result of this Covid-19 virus that's happening around the world. People aren't expecting it and they're going.

3. I just received devastating news that a long time friend, his wife and college age son were killed in a plane crash yesterday. This was a very good guy, successful business man, helped a lot of people. (WP)

- This is not only about managing grief, but trying to make sense of this kind of tragedy. Please remind me how we are supposed to react to tragedies such as these. At an intellectual level, at an emotional level, at a spiritual level. It seems to trivialize life.
- In a world where evil is all too common, here is a guy who made the world a better place and his reward is to have his life, his wife and his young son's life cut short, it makes no sense. Thanks and God be with you always.

Well, it doesn't make sense from a human perspective at all. And it doesn't make sense, it is not fair and it's a tragedy. But when we look at it in terms of the work that aspects do, and whether they finish that work in a particular incarnation, or whether they want to experience the return to the energetic collectively or together, then it makes sense. In this instance, these three incarnate aspects that chose to work together had achieved what they wanted to achieve. And this was a particular juncture that was chosen as a potential point or space where they can move away from the physical and go into the energetic collectively. And so it was simply just a juncture.

When we incarnate, we have about five junctures where we can leave our incarnation that doesn't create karma or even evolutionary debt as a function of it. And some of us can choose to leave at any point really. And we do choose to leave early, for example. Some of us choose to come back and hence some of the near death experiences, where the body is terribly traumatized either through illness or through accident or through other forms of shock, for example, and they go back into the energetic and then they decide to come back to assist in the progress of those other incarnate souls, who are working with them either in their family units or other friendship units or other interactions they have with them in any particular circumstances and environments. And they come back and they say they made a decision to come back. And that happens, so the termination junctures can be reversed in certain conditions.

(45 min) But in real terms, it is quite common for groups who incarnate together to work with each other to end or find a location within event space usually prior to the incarnation process starting in the first place, or prior to incarnation, they decide when they can leave. In this instance, the airplane crash was that time to leave. So although it seems like a complete tragedy from a human perspective, we have to love them for the choice that they've made to go in the way that they've gone. And they've gone in a way, which was quick. From a human perspective probably quite terrifying, to be in a plane crash, for example, for those moments where there's uncertainty about whether the plane can be controlled or whatever. But in essence, it's a very fast way to go and quite an efficient way to go.

And so we have to thank Source that the way they chose to go was by and large fairly robustly quick and was beneficial to them, because they didn't suffer in the way that some people choose to suffer when they choose their termination juncture. Okay, so from a physical perspective, it makes no sense, but from an energetic perspective, it's part of their life plan they've collectively worked on and maybe they've finished that and they all decided to go back to the energetic to leave this incarnation collectively together. Okay, very good. Thank you very much, WP for that. That's excellent.

Okay, we're still moving on quite well. This is from MO. This is the lady who's in Japan and is translating the books into Japanese, so thank you very, very much. And she's also got lots and lots of questions for me. Okay, so the first question is...

4. What is the metaphysical function of rainbows? We can never reach them or touch them, but they are there. I am wondering if they have any functions in higher frequencies that we are not aware of. (MO)

No, they're purely a physical function of the refraction of light through denser air basically or air that's very humid or cloud-based or solid and we start to have rain, for example. So it's purely a refraction of light. There is no metaphysical function of them at all. Although we do feel good, when we see them. We like to see them, so from a metaphysical perspective, they help to keep us happy and high frequency. So it's a good question, but there's no other reason for them being there other than that they're a physical function of weather basically. Next question.

• Why do lower astral entities fear that they are going to go extinct as a result of the Earth moving up through the frequencies? They are not created by Source? They don't evolve??

No, lower astral entities are created by either stray thought processes of anger, such as us, or the Darwinian evolution of energy. But they're not really...unless they can evolve to the point of sentience, they don't have any reason to be here to be fair, specifically, if they're created through stray human thought processes or other incarnate entity's thought processes. So they're just there. It's like they're sort of Flotsam and Jetsam basically.

So, for instance, when we move up the frequencies and they attach themselves to us, they can't exist with us, because they can't keep up with us. And they can no longer steal our energy, for example, and maintain their own, because a lot of them can't metabolize their own energy. Okay, so they sort of fear and they create fear. Part of their ability to maintain their existence is to create fear and make us work with fear. And in doing that, we keep ourselves low frequency, and therefore, we don't move up the frequencies. We don't ascend the frequencies, and they stay where they are, which is of benefit to them. Okay, next question.

- In "The Origin Speaks" P69, it says: "All of these energies that were initially used for the creation of the twelve New Origins were I noticed special...that I decided to corral them into one holding space, saving them for future use."
- 1) Did The Origin use all of these energies to create Source Entities, or did it only use a portion of them?
- 2) If It used only a portion of these energies to create Source Entities, then what did It do with the rest?

Well, the rest of the energy was reabsorbed into the Origin, so the amount of energy that was used to create the Source Entity was basically reprogrammed to a certain level, although some of it didn't get reprogrammed and that's why there are the OM. Basically, the level of sentience and level of energy used to create a Source Entity is significantly lower than that which is used to create the twelve Origins experiment.

(50 min) So that energy was reabsorbed basically into the Origin and some of it wasn't, and hence, it stayed as it was, and therefore, it didn't become part of a Source Entity and became the various different forms of OM and OMness. Okay, so it's a good question. Thank you.

• How does The Origin's energetic signature different from the Source Entities? How does it feel like?

Ah, it can't be described. We go from the immense to the super immense. To be fair, when I experience the Origin and the Source, I don't experience them in totality. Nobody could cope with it, certainly not in an incarnate state. And so I can't really describe it, but I do know that there's a difference in them. I know that one has in the background, you just know it's infinitesimally larger than Source Entity. And you know when you communicate with the Source Entity, you know that it's infinitesimally large. So it's like you just know that there's a...it's like looking into a well and you can see the water at the bottom and you know that that is the Source Entity. And then if you realize that the depth behind the top of the surface of the water is bottomless, that's the difference between Source and the Origin.

You know that there's a point where one feels the difference between a Source Entity and the Origin, because there's limitation to it in reality. But in the Origin, there is no limitation. There's limitation in terms of its recognition of self or the level of sentience, which is occupying its self, that is limited; hence, its desire to create, its desire to know itself better to accelerate its own evolution and to create other entities that exist in that progression of evolution. But in terms of how big it is, you just know that it's bottomless, whereas you just know that the Source is or you can feel the limitation that the Source is, even though it's infinitesimally large. You know that it's just mind blowingly, unfathomably, uncalculably large behind it. Okay, very good. Right, so next question.

- When you are communicating with The Origin, The OM, and Source Entities, do you hear their "voice" or do you get "impressions" of their message and translating/ converting them into words? I am wondering how does our ultimate creator's (The Origin's) voice sound like?

I get information in all sorts of ways. I hear it, I see it, I'm it, I be it, I visualize it, I just know it, it's there. There's a difference in the energy signature associated with the OM, with Anne, for instance, with the Origin, and with the Source Entities. And you just know it's different, that there's no difference in...well, there can be a difference in the clairaudient way in which they communicate with me. And it's just presence. I can only describe it as presence. The difference between the Source Entity and the Origin is presence. It's a difference in presence.

And the voice is fairly similar, if I said I was picking it up clairaudiently. And Anne's voice is definitely different. And I feel the difference between the OM collectively and Hum, for instance, as being familiar to me, so it feels like me, because it is me. They are me. I am it and they are me. And the same with Anne, although Anne's been individualized, so I hear Anne in her earthly voice, so to speak. But with the Origin and the Source Entity, it's just...I just hear it as "me" but it's not me. It's not me and I know it's not me, because it's not the words and the information that I would expect to hear from myself. So it's got this like neutrality about it and immenseness, you know, this presence. The only way to describe it is presence. That's the only way to describe it. That's the difference, a difference in presence, certainly, between the Source Entity and the Origin. Okay, next question, thank you.

- Is there a certain experience in the physical that help us evolve faster than the others? What I mean is that, if we are all together, experiencing bliss and communion with God in the energetic, then experiencing the opposite, such as solitude, in the physical helps us evolve faster? If so, then what kind of experience has the highest score of evolution?

Balanced experience is what gives us the highest score of evolutionary content. We can't just have the good stuff. We have to have the good, the bad, and all the bits of shades of gray in between. We need to have the thought process that everything we experience is of benefit irrespective of whether we like it or not. And that is the attitude, that's the state of beingness we need to have in our incarnations is to allow us to recognize that we need to be in a state of acceptance. And when we're in a state of acceptance, and we just deal with that which we subsequently end up being part of, and we deal with it in the most efficient way without blaming others, just doing it and getting on with it and then finalizing the work to allow us to move onwards, then we will evolve faster. Okay, then our evolution will be faster based upon our term in our incarnation here. Good, next question.

- If beings ultimately become entities, then Source Being becomes Source Entity when The Origin moves onto next polyomniscient sentient self-awareness?

Yes, yeah. Everything becomes an entity, because they have the ability to create basically. Now a being has the ability to create anyway. A being can create an entity, but it's being transformed, when it goes into the next level of polyomniscient sentient area of self-awareness, the next level of twelve levels of structure beyond the current level of twelve levels of structure of the Origin, then the Origin is assigning them to that next level rather than reabsorbing them. And in doing so, it changes their status, so to speak, from being to entity, and there's a difference in the functional capability of a being vs. an entity.

I think read "The Origin Speaks" that explains that. It might also explain it in "The Anne Dialogues" as well. There's a definite difference in terms of the functional ability between a being and an entity. But when we go into the next set of twelve levels of structure, that this Origin is trying to make polyomniscient sentient area of self-awareness, then everything that's part of the first series of twelve levels of structure will become, [is] given, granted Entity status or beyond. Who knows? Good question.

- What is a subfrequency? How does it differ from frequency functionality-wise?

The only way to describe it is a subfrequency fills the gaps in between one frequency to another. It's like if we have a frequency, like the first frequency, second frequency, third frequency, fourth frequency, fifth frequency, sixth frequency, seventh frequency, etc., etc., then the gap in between the sixth and the seventh, if it has a metric, let's say a metric based upon ten, just as an example, then we go from 6.1, 6.2, 6.3, 6.4, 6.5, etc. So 6.1, 6.2, 6.3, etc., etc., is a subfrequency of 6. It's the next level up. It's above 6 but below 7. And those are subfrequencies.

But you can also get sub-subfrequencies, so you could get 6.1.1, 6.1.2, 6.1.3, so it's the gaps in between. It's the energy that exists on the really microlevel associated with the structure of everything that is obviously structure of Source Entity, and therefore, structure of the Origin. Okay, so that's a good question.

- How are Source Entities interacting with the Source Being? Is it similar to big brothers and sisters taking care of new born in the physical?

I'm just asking the question actually, because I don't know. I'm being told that clearly they're aware of its existence and they acknowledge its existence and they're happy to know of its existence and they applaud its existence. And they applaud its route to sentience that it got to, but they're basically telling me that in essence, they've got their eye on their own work to a level where they are focusing on what they're doing to create their own evolutionary progression on behalf of the Origin.

So this presence is acknowledged and they're happy for it to be there, and obviously, they could and would, if they needed to communicate with it, but they're so engrossed with their own work that they are not really too concerned about whether they do communicate with it or not. And the Source Being is also experiencing its own level of, shall we say, focus as well. So this next question links into one from JM as well, which is good. We've sort of answered this question a little bit, but let's go over it again.

- You once told me that The OM evolves as well. Then what happens to The OM when all of TES in SE1 are elevated and gain SE status? I am wondering if the Pure OM becomes Super Pure OM or they don't change their status, since they are not in the evolutionary cycle.

(1 hr) I think the next bit links into it as well.

- Why The OM who are not in the evolutionary cycle care about our evolutionary cycle so much?

Okay, they're interested in it, but they don't want to be involved with it. That answers that question. They're just interested to see how it works and interested to see how it affects those entities that are part of the evolutionary cycle. And it's like watching somebody lie on a bed of nails. Interesting to see how they cope with it, how they do it, what their strategy is, what their posture is, how long they can stay there for, how sharp the nails are, how many nails there are there, what the population of nails is that allows the person to lie on the bed of nails. So it's a bit like it's sort of a cursory interest, if you want to say that.

But I'm not really seeing any of them becoming super OM, for example. They just are as they are. I'm being told it's quite a unique condition where they will continue to be as they are. They will obviously gain evolution as a function of everybody else evolving — that's how they gain their evolution. As everything evolves, they evolve as well, because they're actually smaller individualized units of Origin that don't have a task. They are the uncreated creations. They just happened. So I'm being told here they evolve as a function of everybody else evolving.

So in the same way that the Source evolves through its individualized units of sentience interacting with other things evolves, you know, doing their incarnations and experiencing the multiverse evolve, so to speak, so the Source Entity evolves. So as a function of the Source Entity evolving, so does the Origin. As a function of all these things evolving, so do the OM. But I'm not seeing them becoming "super OM," just more expansive, more aware. I suppose you could call them "super OM" — they're telling me they wouldn't call themselves that. They're saying that we just are and we evolve. We evolve as a function of others entering into the evolutionary cycle, just as some of the Curators do or all of the Curators do.

So they're saying that we just are. They're saying what we will do is expand with the expansion of the evolution, as appropriately. Hmm, okay, fine. That's interesting. They're basically just saying that we just expand with the expansion. We will always remain what we are irrespective of what becomes. But there will be synergy in terms of our expansiveness or beingness as a result of who and what we are and how things around us evolve as well. Hmm, okay.

- We sometimes hear about people die from drug overdose. I am wondering if their evolutionary debts are same as or worse than death from suicide. The death from drug overdose might not be intentional, but it is not really "accidental" neither...

(1:05) No, there is a different level of evolutionary debt associated with suicide, unless they are in very rare cases an aspect or a soul is given an exemption in allowing it, and that becomes part of their termination juncture to leave the incarnation that they're currently in. Basically, it's a karmic debt that they have. It's becomes an issue in terms of they need to be purified energetically and frequently before they can reintegrate or recommit with their True Energetic Self. But also they have a very big level of karma associated with the addiction to and the attractivity to physical stimulus, which of course drugs are. So they don't actually get an evolutionary debt per se, but they do get a significant amount of karma that they've got to overcome.

- Are Generators always successful in creating new materials? Don't they ever fail or have accidents? Do they use Event Space to avoid failure?

I'm going to ask that question. The Generators create materials by the way for those of you who haven't read "The Curators." They don't see what we classify as failures as being failure, they just see it as being knowledge and the evolution of knowledge to be able to do what they're doing. And they may or may not use event space as an opportunity to shortcut things. That's the answer to the question.

Well, if we can, we can, if we can do things we could. We enjoy making things, they're saying. We enjoy doing things, making things and we enjoy the process of developing things. So what the human thought process would classify as a failure is actually a different level of success. It's the elimination of a road or a route to creating what is desired to be created. Hmm, I think we should all think along those lines. Excellent. Thank you entities, the Generating Entities for giving me that information. Very good.

- In "The Curators" P164, it says: "Yes, it is only the highest level of Curators that can invoke the creation of a General Maintenance Entity. Additionally, it is also only the highest level of Curators that can uncreate or dissolve a General Maintenance Entity as well." Doesn't a General Maintenance Entity ever fight back for its existence? Does It willingly be uncreated/dissolved when It finishes Its service?

These are entities that can do anything basically. Yes, that's a good question actually. I seem to remember a similar thought process, when I channeled the information. And what I'm being told is that don't think in that way. It's like they're created as a tool, an autonomous tool. And when the use of that autonomous tool is finished, it's reabsorbed. It's uncreated. So it's a little bit like creating a tool to do a job, but when you've finished the job, you no longer need the tool, so you modify the tool to do something else, for example. That's the way to think of it.

It's a bit like having a motor car. You have a motor car, you create a motor car, you drive the car. The car starts to fail and it gets old, so you disassemble it. You melt it down again and you create something else with the materials that are there. So that there isn't a thought process in the General Maintenance Entities energies, so to speak, or transient consciousness or ability that allows it to go down the road of wanting to maintain its own individuality. Okay, good question, very good.

- In "The Curators" P299, it says: "The more disharmonious frequencies that are combined, the more complicated the energy. The more complicated the energy, the more capable it is of being able to perform more advanced and smaller tasks." Would you give us some examples of these "more advanced and smaller tasks"?

(1:10) Oh, I've got no idea. I can't answer that question. I'm being told it's to do with the structure, creating the structure of the universe or things that exist within the universe. Ah, I'm being given an example here. Things like the function that creates what we call black holes or wormholes is something along those lines. The creation of the ability to work to connect two frequencies together is one of them. Two frequencies that are able to create a universal environment, to connect the universal environment together is one of those things.

Okay, so I'm seeing things like nova — in the gross physical it could be the effect associated with a sun going supernova, and the collapsing of that star creates that condition that could potentially be used, but isn't always. In fact, it's very rare that the function of a star going supernova, and therefore, collapsing in upon itself creates the condition where the highest location or locally high frequency of a lower frequency within a lower universe is in contact with a locally low frequency of a high frequency, which is of a higher universe, and therefore, creating the connectivity. Those things can be created without a need for a wormhole or a black hole. And I'm being told that the use of those particular disharmonious frequencies can create these connections as well. So they can be used, and they can be created by entities, who are very adept or very, very high frequency and can create these things as a function of their manipulation of their environment. Hmm, usually a Curator. Okay, last question from MO.

- In "The Curators" P303, it says: "...any evolutionary progression that is not part of the plan, say in the evolution of energy to the point of sentience..." "... is a bonus, a wonderful bonus, but its product cannot be used in the management of that which is used to evolve, or is an environmental vehicle for evolution." Then when and how does SE use this "wonderful bonus"?

That's a good question. Let me just ask the question. Okay, it's the management of it, isn't it? What I'm being shown here is that it is evolution, which is there, which the Source experiences and absorbs, but it can't be used to manage it. It can't be used to manage that which it used to evolve or as a vehicle for evolution, an environmental vehicle for evolution. So basically, in any evolutionary progression that is not part of the plan in the evolution of energy toward sentience is a bonus, a wonderful bonus, but its product cannot be used in the management of that which it used to evolve.

So basically, any entity that's created or any sentience that's created as a result of this Darwinian evolution that is outside of what was expected, i.e. that which was created or individualized from Source is an extra level of sentience that is created, and therefore, is part of Source, even if it's individualized. It can't be used to manage it. It can't be a Curator, for example. Okay, I hope that explains that. So it's basically, it's like an expansion of the Source's sentience, but it's just an expansion. It's like putting extra memory into your computer. It becomes part of the computer. It's a bonus, it's an extra memory set. But it can't be used to maintain the computer. It's just part of extra memory. Okay, next question from BA.

5. This question is regarding anxiety with autistic people. For example, I was supposed to pick my son at 12 pm, but for some reason I was late for a few minutes. By the time I got to pick him up, he was having a meltdown. It turns out he got really upset that I wasn't there at 12 pm to pick him up. After that he was very violent and angry. (BA)

- My question, why do they have so much anxiety that leads to situations like this?
- More puzzling is the fact that even though they are higher frequency individuals than us, why anxiety takes over their life? Your insight is much needed regarding this. And as always I am grateful for your answers.

(1:15) Well, basically put, we haven't told them we're late. Autistic individuals are incarnate souls, who are operating on and communicating with lots and lots of different frequencies concurrently, many more than our five senses. So when we don't communicate to them or with them, to advise them of something, which is outside of the parameter that we set and we said we were going to do, they get upset, because they believed us. They are pure. They are absolute. And when we say we are going to do something for an autistic individual, and they can feel our energy associated with that commitment, when we don't commit to it, they get annoyed.

They get frustrated, because they can't understand how we can say one thing and not do it. But the thing is if we — and you can experiment on this, BA and everybody else who has autistic children, autistic friends or autistic family members — when we say we're going to do something and we can't fulfill that commitment, send out the energies, meditate on the individual explaining why you're going to be different to what was broadcast to them, whether you're going to be late, whether what you're going to give them is not what you said you were going to give them, whether where you were going to go to is not where you said you were going to go to.

Broadcast, telepathize that which you are going to do differently, so that when you get to them, they already know that there's going to be a change or what that change is. And when you get to them, they'll be calm, because they then know what that change is. And there's no surprise to them. And you are within the parameters that they now know is part of their new expectation.

Okay, right, so I hope that...and I'm sure that US with BigPictureQuestions.com website will also use this piece of information, because it's very useful. There's lots of autistic individuals and people with family and friends, who have got schizophrenia or certain levels of issues associated with multiple connectivity, who will be interested to read that as well. So please use it on the BigPictureQuestions.com website, US. That's the end of the questions.

Part 3. Meditation

Okay, so let's have a look at the meditation to create peace in the world. So it doesn't need to be a long meditation, as we've already had a lot of time within this Satsanga.

Please download the high quality MP3 File to do the guided meditation with Guy Steven Needler via his website or blog (meditation starts at around 1:18 min).

(1:32) Closing comments: That's the end of January's Satsanga. Thank you very much for your questions, really good questions. They're always good questions and they're all written down and transcribed and may end up being the baker's dozen in terms of the books. Let's see. It could well be. That's the way forwards, a book based upon Satsanga questions. Okay, so thank you very much for participating. And we look forward to seeing you again in the next Satsanga, which I believe will be when I look at my diary, when my computer catches up. Okay, it will be on the 27th of February 2021. So I look forward to energetically connecting with you all then. So God's love to you all. Namaste. Stay high frequency and don't forget the Source loves you all. Goodbye and I look forward to being energetically connected with you next time." END

NOTE: I have prepared a Searchable pdf document with ALL World Satsanga Lectures, Questions and Answers collated from 2016-2021 to make it easier for us to see what questions have already been asked in previous Satsangas and what answers were given at the time. This will allow us to ask NEW questions or ask similar questions from a different angle after reviewing what we already know. This document is over 600 pages, so don't try to print it out.

You can go to Needler's website (www.beyondthesource.org) to find the document at this URL:
