Superordinate goal of all entities is to reunite with Source through an evolutionary process of continually raising their frequencies, what was the point of entities descending to low frequency consciousness in the first place? Was this a mistake, a natural consequence of each entity having free will, or was this the plan all along?

If the answer is that in order for the Origin/Source Entity to expand its knowingness of itself, it is necessary for aspects of itself to descend to the lowest frequencies, then what does it say about Origin/Source Entity's inherent need for humans to kill themselves by the tens of millions in the process? It appears to be a fairly pathetic process of discovery which has only abated recently, until the next slaughter occurs - Would a nuclear holocaust help accelerate learning? Given the history of humanity and prehistory (Atlantis, etc) it does not appear that much learning is occurring on Earth. Or is it that earth will forever be a hostile environment, providing lessons to those souls who have evolved in the process and no longer need to incarnate on earth. But other souls who have not yet evolved need the earth's hostile environment to do so?

Did our SE create all entities at once? and what universe(s) did they initially exist and if not the same universe, why not?

Did all entities descend to low frequency consciousness before beginning the evolutionary process to higher frequency consciousness? If not, why not? and why did some do so and others did not?

If experiencing low frequency existences is a good thing, is it better to have been born in Africa vs the USA? Are lower frequency souls attracted to Africa. Did souls born in the USA already experience Africa-like lifetimes?

How many low frequency Earth like planets populated with human like entities are there in the Multi-verse? How many of these are more or less evolved than our Earth?

Did our SE create the physical universe or did the TES's create it? Who populated the earth, for example, with plant and animal life? The History of God states that our SE created the universe in a nano-second (with help from some "early souls") does that mean the stars and planets in there final form or does that mean they set in motion the process of forming the stars and planets which took millennia to form?

Who decided to create physical bodies? SE or the TES's?

If Homo-sapiens (Neanderthals) first appeared some 300,000 years ago, the rate of technological development was apparently extremely slow (thousands of years until the wheel), but a time went on the rate of development increased significantly beginning with the printing press with man on the moon just a few 100 years later. Will the rate of technological development continue to increase exponentially? Will spiritual development keep pace?

Is Dolores Cannon's New Earth an actual event that is taking place, physical and spiritual, or is it a metaphor or is it without standing?

From an event space point of view when our souls depart our current incarnation, do we then have the opportunity reincarnate in what we would see as biblical times AD 100 for example and going the other way reincarnate in the year 2700? Or let's reincarnate in Atlantis millennia ago. Not to mention other than an earthly realm. In other words time is not a factor?

1. Hitler's transition

Was it a cover-up to report Hitler's death as a suicide rather than a murder? It seems that even a basic forensic examination would reveal homicide rather than suicide. Why would there be an interest in presenting it as suicide?

2. Tyrants and their origins

If these tyrants originate from levels similar to Ascended Masters, Archangels, Elohim, or even OM, and yet "act out" as tyrants here, do we truly have a chance of transcending this difficult period and bringing heaven on earth?

3. Gender and tyranny

The tyrants discussed in the book appear to be all male. Have there been female tyrants throughout history? Does the tendency toward tyranny in a low-level environment affect men and women in similar ways?

With free will operating in such a challenging environment, is it possible to become a genuinely good leader? Of all leadership positions, what percentage would you estimate are tyrants versus exceptional leaders?

4. The non-Integris forces above the Illuminati

You describe a non-Integris force above the Illuminati. Why can they not be stopped or returned to Source? What purpose do they serve, and how did they come into existence?

Are these forces actively trying to make humanity fail, and do they take pleasure in our struggles? Are there counter-forces working to balance their influence so that we have a fair chance of succeeding?

5. Collectivism and future leadership

As humanity moves toward collectivism, what will leadership look like? Is it possible — or likely — that tyrants will still emerge in such a system?

What comes after collectivism? Will that next stage allow us to evolve more efficiently and effectively than our current environment?

6. Life plans and safeguards

When souls create their life plans, why can't certain "checksums" be included to help keep an incarnate soul on the integrity path and prevent the slide into tyranny and non-integrity?

Do tyrants plan to become tyrants, or do they slip into it gradually through the challenges of free will, karma, and the temptations of low-level pleasures? Are they warned about the possibilities and probabilities of creating huge amounts of karma both good and bad?

7. Long-term tyrants and walk-ins

For those who extend their influence across multiple embodiments or long periods (such as walk-ins), are they sincerely trying to help humanity and bring heaven on earth? Or are they primarily serving their own desires for pleasure and control?
